Manpower Limits Reached?

By JOHN M. NIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP)—Communist forces in Vietnam are suffering battle fatalities at a rate approaching double that of last year but their total strength, by official U.S. estimates, continues to grow.

Leaders of President Johnson's administration believe it is possible that Communist losses have reached a "cross-over" point—that is, a point at which they exceed the capacity to make replacements.

This would be an important and perhaps decisive turning point in the war.

CALL FOR HELP

Washington officials agree that it could confront North Vietnam's leaders with a need for critical new decisions. They might turn toward peace negotiations, or they might move to expand the war by calling for help from Communist countries which have offered "volunteers."

The trend of American losses in Vietnam also has climbed. The U.S. command in Saigon reported Thursday that U.S. combat deaths last week were 274.

More Grain For India

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (UPI)—President Johnson signed into law Saturday a resolution to provide 3,000,000 additional tons of emergency food grain for India.

The shipment will cost up to $100,000,000, depending on the purchase price.

Plot Suspect Nabbed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Gordon Novel, wanted in New Orleans in connection with the probe of President John Kennedy's assassination, was arrested Saturday in suburban Gahanna.

Gahanna Mayor Paul Van Auker said Novel, 29, a former New Orleans night club operator, was seized in that small community, on a warrant issued by Louisiana authorities.

"It was a matter of recognition," Van Auker said in explaining that his office received word that Novel might be in Gahanna. He would not say from where that word came.

WARRANT RELAYED

Van Auker said he contacted the New Orleans office of Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison, who is conducting the assassination probe, earlier Saturday. "About our belief that Novel was here," he said a warrant was issued for Novel's arrest, relayed to Gahanna police through the Ohio Highway Patrol.

Soon after being lodged in jail, Novel issued a statement. Police distributed the original copy to newsmen. It read in part:

CLEAR HALLS

"I would like to congratulate Chief Robert F. Brandon of the Gahanna Police Department of the suburb of Columbus, Ohio, in his apprehension of myself. His office and his men are to be praised in doing what the supposed master Crime Solver and Cardiff Giant, Mr. Jim Garrison with all his Police State Inquisition power, money, intimidation and harassment couldn't do. My attorneys will fight extradition if necessary to the United States Supreme Court."

He was booked at Columbus City Prison for investigation as a fugitive from Louisiana. He had $36.50 with him when arrested, police records showed.

Arctic PILOT SAFE AFTER 58 DAYS

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP)—Bush pilot Robert Gauchie, 39, arrived in Yellowknife Saturday night, 58 days after he disappeared in a remote section of Canada's Arctic wilderness.

Gauchie was the object of a widespread search which got under way Feb. 3, the day after his plane was last heard from on a flight from Cambridge Bay, 550 miles south to Yellowknife.

He was spotted from the air Saturday by a passenger on board a passing plane. The plane stopped at the remote lake where Gauchie waited with bags packed by his downed aircraft and took him to Coppermine, 126 miles to the north, and then to Yellowknife.

He went immediately to the Yellowknife hospital for treatment of possibly frostbitten feet.

However, he walked off the plane at Yellowknife without assistance, and, except for being 50 pounds lighter than he was two months ago, he appeared to be in good condition.

SEEN BY ACCIDENT

Gauchie was reported to have been spotted by sheer accident by Glen Stevens, an engineer for Pacific Coast Explorations Ltd., during a company flight in a turbo-prop Beaver aircraft from Yellowknife to Coppermine.

Gauchie and his green, yellow and white aircraft was spotted near Samandee Lake, 80 miles due east of Fort Radium.

Sergeant Ray Johnson, head of the RCMP's Yellowknife detachment, said Gauchie was taken to Yellowknife hospital where he met his wife, en route from their family home at Fort Smith, Northwest Territories.

Johnson said it was the first time he could remember of a lost pilot being found alive in the northern wilderness after almost two months.

AFTER 49 DAYS

Two persons missing four years ago in the Yukon-Ralph Flores and Helen Klaben—were found after 49 days.

Gauchie's plane went down on the edge of the northern winter line. He was reported to have had nothing to eat in the last week.

Gauchie had been the object of two searches: the first lasting two weeks by the RCAF, covering more than 300,000 square miles, and then a privately-financed search lasting about a week in late February.

An RCAF spokesman said Gauchie was about 125 miles off the normal flight path.

COLDEST OF YEAR

Gauchie somehow survived weather officially reported to be among the coldest of the year, which included one of the worst blizzards on record during the Easter weekend.

The weather office in Edmonton said temperatures were seldom above zero during the two months, and had plunged to 40 degrees below or colder at night.

Glen Stevens, the engineer who sighted Gauchie's plane, said the plane was not damaged in any way, and was expected to be flown out today after it was refueled.

Five Killed, 205 Hurt

OSAKA (AP)—Five persons perished and 205 were injured Saturday when a crowded Japanese passenger train smashed into a stalled truck at an unattended grade crossing near here. Twenty-five of the injured were reported in serious condition.

Abducted Girl Found Unhurt

CHICAGO (AP)—Carrie Stephens, 8, returned home unharmed Saturday night, five days after she was abducted, and police said a one-armed man has been charged with aggravated kidnapping.

The girl was found in the apartment of Michael Zito, 50, police said, about a mile from her home. Zito was to appear in court today.

Police said Carrie identified

Zito as the man who took her off the street Monday evening. Commander William Murphy of the General Assignment Division said police found Carrie and Zito in the apartment after receiving a tip from a woman who lives nearby. They were alone in the apartment, he said.

Carrie was taken directly from the apartment to Sweden Covenant Hospital for a physical examination.

Detective George Ruchinski said she was "shaken but not hysterical."

Results of the examination were not disclosed, but authorities reported Carrie was not harmed. She told police "the man did not harm me," and reported she had been alone with him since her abduction Monday.

The girl's mother said she had never seen Zito before.

Nice-Guy Mike? No—Ruthlessman!

VANCOUVER (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson played the role of a jovial tough guy as the star attraction Friday night at the Liberal party's fund raising "A Night with the Prime Minister." (See also Page 3.)

A blare of trumpets and torch bearers touched off the lively political entertainment in which Mr. Pearson wondered aloud what it would be like to see Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker dance "the camp fire polka."

"I don't want to be accused of making a personal attack," Mr. Pearson said amid rounds of laughter from the estimated 500 guests at the dinner, "although I'm getting pretty tough these days."

"It appears you have to be crude, tough and cruel to be a good leader," Playing the role of the tough leader, he said: "I'm more ambitious, I'm far more ruthless and I defeat my friends—maybe on Monday morning I'll be a better prime minister."

The dinner was capped by dancers who demonstrated popular steps during the regimes of former Liberal prime ministers since confederation, such as the turkey trot in the days of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

It ended with go-go girls gyrating to the latest steps of what Liberals like to call their go-go party.

Experts Hit LSD Ban

Two mental health experts and an official of the Alcoholism Foundation agreed Saturday liquor is a more serious problem than LSD.

The treatment director of Sevenoaks and the psychiatrist who heads Central Vancouver Island Mental Health Centre at Nanaimo agreed laws banning LSD may usher in a new Prohibition era, where use of an impure product becomes widespread.

Dr. Sven Jensen said in Nanaimo "the effect of banning LSD altogether, is like the effect prohibition had on banning the use of alcohol in the Roaring Twenties."

James Mair of Sevenoaks, a treatment centre for emotionally disturbed children, said B.C.'s new anti-LSD law may turn the drug into a type of "moonshine."

Dr. Jensen said alcohol is a far more serious problem than LSD, especially among teenagers. And he said LSD is a valuable tool in treatment of alcoholism.

Reg. Clarkson, Vancouver Island director of the Alcoholism Foundation of British Columbia, agreed that the problem of alcoholism was of greater magnitude than LSD.

He said 90 per cent of the high school boys and 60 per cent of the girls drink liquor

but less than one per cent probably take LSD.

Mr. Mair, who stressed that he was discussing LSD only as a layman, also suggested the new legislation could make it difficult for medical men to obtain the drug for experimental uses.

"The government's action on LSD reminds me of the venereal disease posters they

Malinovsky Tribute

Old Warrior Given Last Red Respects

MOSCOW (UPI) — The top men in the Kremlin Saturday formed up like a squad of soldiers to pay their last respects to Defence Minister Malinovsky, who died of cancer Friday.

More than 10,000 Soviet citizens, including generals, marshals, soldiers, sailors and children, joined the nation's political leaders in tribute to the man who presided over the development of Russia's strategic missile forces.

Party chief Brezhnev, Premier Kosygin, President Podgorny and other members of the politburo stood as an honor guard at Malinovsky's bier for several minutes.

OPEN COFFIN
Malinovsky's body was in a flower-bedecked open coffin in the white-columned Soviet army house.

Earlier, a line of mourners more than a mile long filed through Commune Square in north central Moscow and wound up the steps into the building.

The late marshal's friends, family and top-ranking military colleagues led the procession under a black-bordered 15-foot-high color portrait of Malinovsky which hung over the open front door.

CHOPIN MUSIC
Under red and black bunting inside, a band played Chopin's Funeral March while officials and others expressed their sympathies to the marshal's family. They stood beside the coffin in which Malinovsky lay in full uniform, his chest covered with medals.

A 20-man honor guard made up of veterans of the three armed services flanked the marshal's body as attendants hustled the crowd past the coffin.

Malinovsky's Red Square funeral is scheduled Monday.

Thant Bid Emphatic

(From UPI, AP)

UN Secretary General Thant, in his most dramatic and demanding bid for peace, Saturday called on the United States to suspend the war in Vietnam unilaterally.

Thant, who returned recently from a Southeast Asia tour, declared in a statement that such a one-sided truce was necessary to halt "the increasingly horrible slaughter of the Vietnam war."

"The United States, with power and wealth unprecedented in human history, is in a position to take this initiative," he said.

NO COMMENT

In Johnson City, Tex., a White House spokesman said President Johnson had no comment, nor did the state department in Washington.

The secretary-general had disclosed earlier that Hanoi had told him in a reply to his latest three-step peace proposals that it would be impossible to work out any details of a Vietnam cease-fire until U.S. air strikes were stopped.

IMPASSE

Thant's original Vietnam peace proposal had called for such a "standstill" cease-fire by both the United States and the Communist sides, to be followed by peace talks and reconvening of the Geneva conference on Vietnam.

But Thant said in his frank statement Saturday that Vietnam peace efforts had reached an impasse.

ONLY ANSWER

"It becomes increasingly clear to me that this impasse can be broken and a halt put to the increasingly horrible slaughter and destruction of the war only if one side or the other shows the wisdom and the courage and the compassion for humanity to take the initiative on a first step—that is to say by undertaking unilaterally to put the standstill truce into effect and thereafter to fire only if fired upon," Thant said.

In Vatican City U.S. Vice-President Humphrey and Pope Paul spent 30 minutes Saturday discussing the Vietnam war and chances of ending it, while outside Italian police kept watch against a recurrence of anti-American demonstrations.

KOREAN PILOTS

At Seoul, a North Korean journalist who defected last week said Saturday there might be 40 or 50 North Korean Air Force pilots serving in North Vietnam, and confirmed that North Korea is providing other concrete military aid to Hanoi.

On the stepped-up war front, U.S. infantrymen, outnumbered six to one, beat back a Communist regiment that charged repeatedly in the wake of the first artillery barrage of the war.

AUSTRALIAN SHIP

U.S. jets screamed in at low level to help break up the Viet Cong waves in the battle zone close to the Cambodian border.

Finally the Communists broke off the fight and tried to dash to safety.

At sea, the 4,500-ton destroyer Hobart, the first Australian ship to see action in Vietnam, joined the U.S. 7th Fleet Friday. Her five-inch guns shelled suspected enemy positions on the South Vietnamese coast. A spokesman said the Hobart went into action about 370 miles northeast of Saigon, near Chu Lai.

Pompidou

Trick Move

French Cabinet Resigns

PARIS (AP) — Premier Georges Pompidou and the French Cabinet resigned Saturday in a manoeuvre designed to maintain control of key posts in the National Assembly for the Gaullists, weakened by recent election defeats.

The new assembly, elected March 12, convenes Monday for a crucial ballot on the presidency of the assembly—equivalent to speaker of the House—and chairmanship of the main committees. The followers of President Charles de Gaulle will need every vote they can muster, and even then the outcome is far from certain.

By resigning Saturday, Pompidou and other Cabinet ministers who won seats in the new Parliament will be eligible to vote Monday. The constitution of the Fifth Republic forbids a Cabinet minister to vote in Parliament.

China Scorns Soft Line

HONG KONG (UPI) — Certain years ago he was purged in ranking officials in China have been urging a reconciliation with the United States for many years, Peking radio indicated Saturday.

Among them apparently was President Liu Shao-chi, who has come under increasingly bitter attacks this week for his opposition to Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung in the Chinese "cultural revolution."

The latest denunciation of Liu and his followers was that they had attempted to "compromise with imperialism," meaning the United States. Liu himself was described as "the greatest powerholder who takes the capitalist road within the party."

There were specific references to the United States in regard to the "compromise" attempts but precise periods of time were not always made clear. Linked with Liu was Ou Ting-yi, Chinese propaganda chief for many years, who was purged in 1958. Peking radio mentioned that in 1949 "and subsequently" Peking officials "afraid of imperialism" desired the compromise with Washington.

Meanwhile in Moscow, the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia accused Chinese Communist leaders of practicing genocide in an effort to wipe out China's 43,000,000 non-Chinese inhabitants.

"The ultimate goal of China's nationality policy is the complete obliteration of specific national peculiarities and distinctive of practicing "anti-Marxist" tions," Izvestia said, citing the chauvinism in a concerted Chinese magazine Hungchi, campaign against the national Chinese minorities.

A New NATO Job?

IN A RECENT SPEECH delivered at Illinois State University, Lord Avon suggested that NATO could well be given a new lease of life through becoming a political instrument rather than remaining a purely military one.

NATO, he said, has fulfilled its primary task of proving itself an effective deterrent to any threat of aggression from the east. But, he added, it would be quite wrong to suppose that on this account NATO's work is finished.

There still remains a job of work to be done in improving relations between eastern and western Europe based on political realism, the former British prime minister told his audience.

"And now," he said, "is the time to do it. NATO must have a new lease of life, for it could be the political instrument of this enterprise."

Calling on his vast experience in the British Foreign Office, Lord Avon is convinced that the western powers would not be able to achieve any agreement of worth if they attempt to negotiate with the Kremlin one by one.

He takes to task those who believe that no progress toward better East-West relations is possible as long as NATO and the Warsaw Pact powers still remain in existence.

"The opposite is nearer the truth," he said, "for ease of relations with Russia depends upon the close unity of the United States and its principal western allies."

"Given such unity and leadership, the scope for manoeuvre is not so restricted, and important results, both military and political, are possible."

"NATO should be the authority and method for negotiation with the Warsaw powers."

Though Lord Avon's suggestion may be considered outrageous in some quarters and unrealistic in others, there is much to commend it. All that is required to bring it about is that those nations who are members of the alliance and who have depended on it for their national security for the past nine years now extend its authority to the diplomatic field.

If such a move obtained approval from the member governments it is even doubtful that the present treaty would have to be revised to meet the additional responsibility. Article 1, for instance, calls for the signatories to undertake to settle any international disputes in which they may be involved by peaceful means.

And surely the most peaceful means of settling an international dispute is through diplomatic or political negotiation. All Lord Avon is suggesting is that NATO be granted the right to negotiate in either of these fields on behalf of one or all of the NATO member nations.

An idea worth considering.

An Enemy Within

JUST HOW WIDESPREAD Communism's contagion may be in the lovely islands of the Indonesian republic it is most difficult to determine. Some authorities believe it to be confined mainly to East and Central Java; others suspect there are cadres throughout the country, from exotic Bali in the south to the wild highlands of northern Sumatra.

What is certain is that the infection is not confined to the estimated million and a half Chinese, although they were probably the original source of the movement. The insurrection of 1948 was Communist-inspired, but it was short-lived and pretty well confined to a relatively small area in Madure, central Java. The active Communist forces probably numbered no more than a few hundred men.

But radical thinking was encouraged, first, during the Dutch occupation, and stimulated further with the coming of the Japanese who, although they ostensibly encouraged republicanism in the islands, were harsh overlords. Communism gained strength in these circumstances.

After Sukarno came to power and the Dutch were ousted in 1956, the new president openly flirted with Peking, and there were strong Communist elements in the government.

However, when the test of strength came two years ago, the forces represented by General Suharto purged the Communists, and in the countryside there were massacres of known adherents to the theories of Peking.

Now, once again, the government at Jakarta has uncovered an alleged Communist plot, this time, it is suspected, fomented from within the Chinese Embassy itself.

If this is the case — and there is no reason to believe the government would distort the facts — it is all of a pattern with the revolutionary formula devised in Peking. Such bothersome meddling in the internal affairs of other nations, particularly such a one as Indonesia, struggling for recovery from grave political and economic ills, is to be deplored.

But at least, Jakarta has a strong leader, in the person of General Suharto, to resist the destructive designs of an enemy within.

Green It Is

THE UNIFICATION BILL isn't yet through Parliament, although short of a miracle or some untoward happening its passage is a certainty, but one thing seems clear enough. The color of the new one-style uniform for the armed forces will be green.

This isn't exactly news, such a preference having been leaked in advance for some time via one of those "sources" that remain anonymous. But now comes a Toronto tailor to disclose that his firm is currently producing the first 450 dark-green uniforms for the future triple servicemen.

It's all very secret yet, however, and won't be on parade for admiration until Expo 67 opens. Then a centennial guard of honor composed of men from the three still separate services will model the new garb.

Even without the Toronto uniform-maker the chosen color scheme was indicated the other day by Prime Minister Pearson when as usual he was correcting an impression created by an earlier statement of his. The unification bill was going ahead, he said, but this didn't mean the troops would appear immediately thereafter "in a green jumper."

So green apparently it is, although not exactly one hopes in the form of jumpers.

There is no word so far of the single name to be selected, or invented, for the single serviceman in prospect. Disclosure of the uniform color before this is settled is apt to invite titillating suggestions. Someone might propose that the combined armed force be called Green Hornets, for instance.

And we doubt the troops would like that.

The Fathers of Confederation, Says Judy:
"They Were All Bunch of Damn Tories"

LOVE that Judy LaMarsh.

Always doing and saying things.

Doing things like getting those wigs, the first of them a dark brown creation to match her own coiffure, the second a blonde job, and now a red mop-top.

And saying things — such things as she said to Centennial Commissioner John Fisher: "Forget that Fathers of Confederation jazz, they were all a bunch of damn Tories anyway."

LaMarsh has a nifty change of quoteable pace — she either charms or enrages 'em.

You should have seen her the other day giving the business to a Senate committee.

She was billing them in on some of the centennial hijinks.

And while few, if any of them will be buck-and-winging-it at the capital's centennial centre where every night the swingers

— tourists and natives alike —

are frugging to the Confederation

Rock, they like to hear about such carefree carryings-on.

So, in gratitude, they told her how nice it was to have "such a charming young woman" keep them clued in on the centennial scene.

And you know what she told them?

"You're all such dear old sweethearts. And you know — this is just about the only place in the whole country where the men are knowingly gallant enough to call a girl young at

You could probably hear the old guffers purring from where you sit, they were that pleased.

But Miss Judy isn't always so tres charming.

For wasn't it the LaMarsh girl who hung on Conservative leader John Diefenbaker's nickname he probably detests

the most, "Old Mr. Bedlam?"

She tagged him with that one — and it's more or less stuck to him in certain circles — when she headed the Liberal "Truth Squad" in the 1962 federal general election, and sat there below the platform at his campaign meetings, elaborately keeping track of what she called his "half-truths, untruths but never true-truths."

It was done, she sweetly smiled, in a spirit of "affection for the delightfully preposterous

old gaffer."

But give LaMarsh this — if she's rough with the Opposition, she's often just as tough with her own troops.

Like the other day when she was making a routine and in a fastively milk-and-water confidential speech, of absolutely explosive content. Or so it started off.

Then, something crossed her thought patterns and she went away out of orbit on her text, remembering right off the top of her brown-blond-red head

how suddenly, John Matheson,

the Brockville MP who is one of

Prime Minister Pearson's parliamentary secretaries, had surprisingly broken off a world tour, heading home for The Hill

"before somebody managed to throw a bag over his head."

This was something of an

"in" joke, entirely wasted, and a pity, on her audience too far removed from these political parts to dig Mr. Matheson's global gaffings.

He had flown out of Ottawa announcing he was going to Paris to fix up a few trade problems — thereby irritating

Trade Minister Bob Winters.

Then he was going to Rome to look into some immigration

into Immigration Minister Marchand's wire-brush hair. And finally, he would be in India to

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonel Ottawa Bureau

see what might be done about famine relief — which happens to be the business more property of External Affairs Minister

Marlin.

So that's why Judy figured maybe John Matheson's head better be "bagged" — before he alienated everybody in cabinet.

And, "Oh boy," she allowed,

as she came down off the platform, "am I going to hear about this when I get back to

But that's Judy, Canada's centennial "Queen of Culture."

A character. Colorful. A great kicker. Real political fun-and-games girl. But competent.

Keeps her canny cool.

No shrinking ministerial violcluding the prime minister usually very much aware of her

— she may sometimes even scare the PM — and they almost all like her.

Which politically makes her a great operator.

Nigerian Crisis Grows

By STANLEY MEISLER
From Nairobi, Kenya

While visiting remote villages of Senegal, I have almost never seen a photograph of Leopold Senghor. Almost no one mentions his name. I doubt if more than a handful know who he is.

He happens to be President of Senegal, president of their nation.

This phenomenon in Senegal is a familiar one in Africa. Almost all African nations are nations in name only. Their people lack a sense of nationalism, a sense of loyalty to the central government, a sense of kinship with all other people who live in the country.

This is a sore problem for African leaders trying to weld a united country out of tribes, religions and regions. In fact, it lies at the heart of the gravest crisis in Africa today — possible civil war in Nigeria, the largest nation (or what once seemed like, a nation) in Africa.

In the Eastern Region, of Nigeria, people are more loyal to the Ibo tribe than to the Nigerian state. This probably was always true in an extent, but the feeling intensified last year when thousands of Ibos were massacred while working in the Northern Region of Nigeria.

The government of Eastern Nigeria now feels it must take all steps — including secession if necessary — to protect its Ibo people from oppression by the Nigerian tribes of other regions.

Unlike most European states, which were created by the force of nationalism in the 18th and 19th centuries, most African states were created by outsiders drawing lines on inaccurate maps in the 1890s. The colonial powers divided up the real estate without any regard for the people who lived here.

The border between the Gold Coast and Togo, for example, cut the Ewe tribe in half. Rule over the Somali people was divided among Italy, Britain, France and Ethiopia.

When independence came, the new African leaders inherited the old artificial boundaries, with all their strange tribal and religious divisions.

Besides imposing nationalism from above, Africans have tried one other way to build a nation. They have loosely bound several different societies into a large federation, hoping that services and economic interest would later develop into nationalism. That was the Nigerian way, which seems to be failing.

But there are special reasons for the seeming Nigerian failure. Nigeria was a federation in which one partner — the Northern Region — had more power than the others. The federal government was always balanced precariously. That balance was upset in 1962 and 1963 when the Northern Region, with the help of the Eastern Region, tried to destroy the political leaders of the Western Region.

The Nigerian lesson seems to be that a federation will fail unless the partners have equal strength of safeguards from oppression by others.

BACKGROUND

Commonwealth Shows Concern

By ALAN HARVEY, Colonial London Bureau

The Commonwealth moved last week to try to preserve peace and unity in Nigeria, Africa's tottering giant.

Commonwealth secretary general Arnold Smith, sent a leading aide on a pacifying and fact finding mission to Nigeria.

The envoy, deputy secretary general Amishadai Larson Adu, former secretary of the cabinet in Ghana, will spend a few days in Ghana gathering information before proceeding to Nigeria for an indefinite stay. On his return he will report to Smith.

Nigeria, keystone of the African commonwealth, has tried hard to recover a workable political system after two military coups last year and the massacre of eastern Ibos by the Moslem north.

Nigeria is the most populous state in Africa, with nearly 60,000,000 people and abundant resources. Its 350,000 square miles make it the potential pace-setter of African evolution.

The precarious unity of its four regions snapped suddenly fourteen months ago with an outbreak of violence that took place just a few days after a meeting in Lagos of commonwealth prime ministers, the first such gathering outside London.

A former president of Nigeria has warned that the breakup of Nigeria could lead to chaos worse than the Congo.

And a Good Thing Too

Students Won't Be Muzzled

The faculty-firing controversy at the University of Victoria has several depressing aspects. One of them is the cry of outrage from a segment of the public because students have dared to speak on the issue.

Mass meetings, the possibility of a boycott of classes, the candid airing of the matter in the student press — these things have roused alarm in many people.

From afar comes word of student unrest on other campuses. Even high school students are restless.

What's going on? Let's look at the campus where students have been making news increasingly in the past two years.

Last year some students refused to pay a $56 tuition fee increase for a time. They marched through downtown Victoria to protest the increase.

In January, Island students were joined by others from the mainland in another march through town to the steps of the legislative buildings.

There were high school students, student nurses, students from the B.C. Institute of Technology in the crowd. Among other things they were asking for equalization grants for students who must live away from home to get post-secondary education.

A LOOK AT LEARNING

By BILL STAVDAL

The boorish behavior of some of them toward Education Minister Pearson created a bad impression among the public. The minister's sarcastic remarks which provoked the students' jeers were overlooked.

Now we have the faculty crisis at UVic, in which students have played a leading part.

Contrary to some opinion the students are not trying to run the university. On two occasions recently their leaders have urged the student body to refrain from premature demonstrations.

What they have done is insist on some explanation for the dismissals of three faculty members the students regard as competent.

Unfortunately, the instinctive response of many adults has been anger at the students for speaking out. The facts of the case have been largely ignored by those who believe the problem will be solved by slapping down the students.

Without entering into the pros and cons of the faculty crisis, it can be argued that young men and women have a right to speak up in a matter concerning the kind of education they are going to receive. If they do boycott classes as a protest gesture on the eve of exams, then why should anyone else get excited?

The student protest movement at UVic must be viewed in the broad context of student activism which is gaining strength on Canadian campuses year by year.

Until a decade or so ago students dissipated their energies in pointless hi-jinks. Student councils confined themselves to running dances and debating their budgets.

Today they are looking to real issues which concern not only students but the whole of society. Hundreds of graduates have volunteered to spend two years working overseas to help the people of underdeveloped nations. The Company of Young Canadians has become controversial because it is fumblingly trying to deal with real Canadian problems which older adults prefer to ignore.

Students at UVic organized the Canada 99 series of discussions of the past winter, which attempted to deal with contemporary issues facing the nation. A small galaxy of distinguished speakers has been brought to speak here through the effort of students.

This is not to canonize our students. There will always be thoughtless excesses and occasional outrages, like the beer bottle bopping of a commissioner at Government House a year ago.

The best students at university — and even in high school — are a superior lot to those of a generation ago. They think and they speak about things that matter, not just party-raiding.

It's unrealistic to tell them to shut up while they spend four years studying. They are speaking up precisely because they have been studying.

It has been said that university students have no right to criticize the society which subsidizes their education. A society which would buy tranquility at this price is already in its grave.

Pioneers, Pollution, Park Punks

Scene Good, Bad, Indifferent

Punks in parks, pollution and pioneers — they're all part of the civic pot pourri, all grist for the municipal mill.

It costs about $150,000 a year to run Beacon Hill Park and right now it looks worth every cent of the money.

All the more reason why it should be kept clear of young hooligans who, travelling in gangs, crowd and intimidate people. There have been reports that elderly people have been frightened in this way and aldermen are determined that it will not continue.

Mayor Hugh Stephen has taken a strong stand against vandalism and thuggery in this town and police will be told to step up patrols.

Beacon Hill Park is a priceless asset and it must be protected. Let's not have another Central Park where New Yorkers are afraid to walk the paths after dark for fear of muggers.

There is a group of dedicated people in Victoria and environs who will accept no compromises in the matter of air pollution and more power to them.

CITY HALL COMMENT

B.C. Forest Products Ltd., the worst offender over the years, has spent a lot of money installing controls which virtually eliminates fly-ash fallout but to these people that is just not good enough.

There's still smoke and where there is smoke there is contamination, they say. Accordingly they have been bombarding the city council with letters demanding corrective measures.

The city is in a rather unenviable position. B.C. Forest Products is now conforming to the provisions of the municipal bylaw for the most part and is therefore not liable in the courts.

The smoke is still there, true, but the fallout is practically gone. There is also the question of just how much water vapor there is in the white smoke which pours from the stacks. The powder which is the cause of the smoke is very high in moisture content.

B.C.F.P. executives have stated that it is the firm's intention to truck a lot of the sawdust in the pulp mill at Crofton in the near future, thus further reducing the nuisance.

The sooner the better. More than 600 pioneers gathered at the Empress Hotel on Tuesday to receive centennial medallions and take tea to the tunes of Billy Tickle — and a heart-warming affair it was.

The old people, all of whom had lived 75 years in Canada in order to qualify, were in all stages of debility and mobility and it was touching to see the way they helped each other, their courtesies and their consideration.

Age has compensations and one of them is usually the acquisition of good manners.

This space hasn't always been kind to the local centennial society so it's a pleasure to report that its members did a fine job of organization and management. The old people's garments were checked for them on arrival and, as soon as was possible considering the numbers involved, they were seated.

Everything was done quietly and efficiently and the affair at the Empress was a resounding success.

Idea Bubble in Music Hall Man

City Won't Beat Me Club Owner Insists

By PATRICK O'NEILL

"I love this town, I won't let it beat me," said Skip Forster, back from Ontario bubbling with entertainment ideas.

As his club in the Century Inn basement, The Music Hall, comes around to its first anniversary, Forster is still looking for the key to success.

But he hasn't failed yet, either. And he knows the club will have to go up or down.

He scouted clubs in the east on his recent trip, testing trends, trying to find out what works, and why.

The first thing that hit him was the difference in response for artists who drew little attention in Victoria.

At the Riverboat in Toronto, a folk act was playing three shows a night. The packed coffeehouse was cleared at the end of each show.

"People were lined up in freezing weather, and some stayed outside as long as two hours until they could get in."

The act? Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee, the same pair that played at Forster's club several weeks ago, and lost money.

But Forster knows now he will have to do more than bring in a high-priced act for a couple of weeks, to get the cash register working.

"It would take at least three acts like that, in close succession, to show whether Victoria could support that kind of salary."

At Le Hibou in Ottawa, he found another innovation.

On the weekends from midnight to 6 a.m. the club was given over to rhythm and blues.

But it's an idea that Forster would have difficulty adapting in his Government Street location, because the noise would disturb hotel customers upstairs.

"I was talking to the owners of Le Hibou about the possibility of trading acts," he said.

Freedom or Restraint?

Russian Theatre Embroiled

By RICHARD BERTON MOSCOW (LAT)—The recent denouement of a top theatrical director here underscores a current argument over freedom of restraint of legitimate Russian theatre.

Anatoly Efros was shifted quickly from chief director at one of Moscow's most progressive playhouses, Lenin Komsomol Theatre, to a lesser post as one of several directors at the Moscow Drama Theatre.

The importance of the incident is that Efros is a symbol of an intense debate now going on in the Soviet Union.

The debate is over proper and appropriate art forms ranging from the theatre to literature and painting and music. Much of this latest argument between liberal and conservative forces in the theatre began in 1965, when the Komsomol opened a series of what were considered politically charged plays.

A day after Efros went, Literary Gazette, the official organ of the Soviet Writers Union, mounted a stiff attack against the four plays staged at the Komsomol. The main point—none of the plays lived up to what is termed "socialist realism," the one creative style tolerated in official Soviet circles.

Only Truly Regional One

Theatre of Victoria Unique in Canada

"Victoria has the only truly regional theatre in Canada," according to Toronto actors Edwin Stephenson and Dan MacDonald.

"There's nothing going on in Toronto at all," said Stephenson. "As somebody pointed out, Toronto is a touring town. It's a city of 2,000,000 that can't support its own theatre."

NOTLY FRENCH

MacDonald said Montreal is producing a short work, but it is almost all in French.

Nova Scotia's Neptune Theatre was an imposed culture, taken whole and placed in Halifax.

Even the Manitoba Theatre Centre is now "a little Stratford."

"There's much more excitement about theatre in Victoria than there is in Toronto," Stephenson said.

OPENS FRIDAY

The two are in Victoria to play the leads in Point of Departure, which opens at the McPherson Playhouse Friday.

Both have worked before with the play's director, Bastion Theatre artistic director Peter Mannering.

Stephenson, who comes originally from Winnipeg, worked with Mannering at the Manitoba Theatre Centre. They acted together in separate tables.

HOLIDAY THEATRE
MacDonald, whose home is Nova Scotia, played with Peter in the early days of Holiday Theatre in Vancouver.

Both said that, despite the hoopla, Canada's 100th birthday isn't likely to make much difference to the performing arts.

"A lot of people think centennial means work for Canadian actors. It just isn't so. Most of the big productions are coming in from outside the country," FROM ELSEWHERE

"All the shows at Expo are productions from other countries."

Stephenson attached the centennial festish for building big fancy playhouses, without financing the plays or players to go in them.

He said one city is spending $37,000,000 on a giant theatre that will probably be used no more than 10 times a year after it's built.

ARTISTIC DIRECTOR
"Why with just $2,000,000 of that money spent on a theatre company, think of the rewards they would get."

"It would put a company on its feet, hire a top artistic director, pay good actors."

MacDonald said, "Even $200,000 would do miracles for theatre companies."

Instead, the actors go begging while planners are satisfied with the trappings of theatre.

MORE IN EXODUS
But actors can only last so long in such a sterile atmosphere.

Canadians are making names for themselves on the world and more are joining the exodus.

The Torontonians quoted a Newfoundland official who said of Confederation's 100th anniversary: "If Canadians think they are a nation, they must be on an LSD trip!"

BACKSTAGE

with Patrick O'Neill

A mini-light show is in the works for Gipper's Music Hall this coming weekend, when the jug band brings its own special lighting effects for its act.

The band, called the Double-Breasted Galvanized Jazz Whistle, will bring several lights to make strange effects when it headlines the bill Friday and Saturday.

The show by the grass-roots organization should be caught by all collectors of objects d'art.

DOUBLE-EDGED

It's good time music, anti-blues and feeling fine. The four boys and a girl are top entertainers as well as good musicians—their humor is visual, audio and double-edged.

They do things from Ron Flatman's tender ballad Joanne ("Joanne is a song about murder, violence, hatred... something for every member of the family") to cigarette commercials like Acapulco Gold and instrumentals like The Cretin Dwarf Eating Watercress Sandwiches.

Ken Bostock won high praise from adjudicator Franklin Johnson in the Island one-act drama festival, which ended at Nanaimo Saturday night.

He played in St. Matthias Little Theatre's production of N. F. Simpson's The Form, which was a success in the competition.

Mr. Johnson said Ken "is a very good actor. He led the others in his own rhythm."

Health problems may force Glen Atkinson to leave Bert Binny's revue Up to Now, scheduled for Friday at 8:30 p.m. in St. Martin's-in-the-Field Hall.

Also in the show will be Ted Gaskell, My People, the Marge Lindley Dancers and others.

"We'll boo the villain and cheer the heroine," said Jo Pepper, describing the oldtime farce built into the St. Luke's Players production of Lily the Felon's Daughter.

It will be presented in St. Luke's Hall May 3 to May 6. Cast includes Marg Bridgman, Ian Pool, Don Martin and Laurie Westlake. The show is directed by Harry Luker.

Chief Mario Fata is waiting anxiously for the day when he will introduce an Italian trio in his Douglas Street Pizza Palace.

Among those working in the in-the-round theatre medium for the spring are Joan Fordham, Ed Fordham, Brownie Palfrey, Barry Flatman, Dan Christian, Ian McIntyre and Glenn MacDonald. They will be in a production at Bastion's Government Street studio.

Romantic leads are much in demand for summer theatre this year. Jerry Gooley's Smile Show, a summer outdoor revue and Bastion's Little Mary Sunshine are all moving ahead, and flashing teeth are always welcome.

The 22 singers include 125 under the age of 14 and 47 in the senior level. The 220 speakers number 33 novices and 26 who will recite their own favorite poem.

The 58 accordion entries include a full-fledged band, four school orchestras, three string ensembles and a lone chamber ensemble.

No one entered the first classical guitar contest.

In all, the nine adjudicators will judge 300 classes, 1,272 entries and somewhere around 8,000 individual competitors.

Children's Musical

William Thomas ON MUSIC

Last week we took a look at the critics, so now it's only fair that we take a look at audiences—and what an odd lot they are!

It's always been my opinion that audiences would be a happy field for study by any competent ornithologist with a touch of imagination.

What birdwatcher worth his binoculars could resist the Birds-of-Paradise, the Needle-Beaked Score Scanner, the Organizing Oriole or the Hysterical Hummingbird?

They are to be seen and heard at every concert or theatrical performance.

The Bird of Paradise is easily identifiable in the front seats as it flits about in silk, satin and outer plumage of mink.

This rava avis is distinguished by its avowed intent of drawing attention to itself. These birds, bow, nod, wave, flutter programs and clap with abandon as they take their culture pill with a flourish. During the performance they usually put their heads under their wings and nod off to sleep only to awaken with vigor at intermission.

The strident cry of this species is heard at its best when confronted by another bird in brighter plumage.

Males Usually Dull

The above comments are best applied to the female of the variety for, unlike the mallard, this variety has given all the splendor to the female.

Male specimens are usually dull and rather inhibited by the exotic nature of their companions. They are normally to be found meekly and while their partners flutter about.

The Needle-Beaked Score Scanner is much harder to find in this city but does exist. Look for a tweedy-type suit in the male—and glasses, often rimless.

These are scattered through the house with copies of the music being played. They glisten in a hard coat of technical musical snobbery.

Wings Usually Flap

They can be seen displaying programs, checking tickets or wondering in a nervous panic if the soloist likes his lodgings.

If there are any minor technical mishaps, they can be heard flapping their wings in union.

As with all groups this bird classification is not without its predators, for who is not familiar with the Star Hawk? Star Hawks can be seen circling at great heights ready to pounce on an unwary guest artist. Usually the guests are spirited away for display at some social function or other.

The last variety for consideration is the Hysterical Hummingbird, a most unfortunate creature.

This bird owns a hi-fi set and has all the records of everything and often belongs to one of those record clubs that churn out bootleggers each month.

A Rare Interview with Charlie Chaplin:

Still an Odd Ray of Light

By FRANCIS WYNHAM

LONDON — "I won't open my next film in London. I'll open in Kalamazoo or somewhere and leave London till later. I don't understand what's happening there now. I think they're swinging-drunk."

Charles Chaplin, in one of his exceedingly rare interviews, was discussing the reviews of his latest film, The Countess from Hong Kong, which the critics hated and the public likes — judging from box office returns and ecstatic fan mail.

Chaplin

London's swinging, he said, is "a peculiar sort of desperation, a somnambulism, a negation of art, of any sort of simplicity. When the swinging thing is over, what will they have left?"

And then, swinging at critics, other movies and other things: "Every once in a while you see a ray of light, someone behind the camera with a sensitive hand. But more often on TV than in the cinema."

It's just what a little boy would do, the most inarticulate thing really, like dribbling. It says nothing — but the intellectuals find it very profound.

"I was amused by Goldfinger. One scene I thought was so funny, when the whole army falls down gassed during the robbery of Fort Knox. But Doctor Zhivago seemed very banal to me — that ridiculous scene when he writes a poem by candlelight."

"And Blow-Up was so slow and boring. I wouldn't go on for hours to work up to an eventual striptease. Or pretend that this man doesn't notice a murder."

"So much has been done already. I saw a bit of a Bease film and it had that old, old gag, a bubble bath. We did all this stop action business in 1914. It was very dull then and nobody paid much attention."

"Knock 'em down, drag 'em up, all those impossible Keystone gimmicks—it's all right, but they put it on in such a pretentious way now."

"There's a quick phase for thinking it smart and swinging."

Countess was the fact that they were unanimous. And they seemed so personal, an attack on me. All they were interested in was 'Chaplin has a flop.' In the old days, critics could slaughter quite a good play with just one quip.

"But there was nothing like that — these were so dull. Why couldn't they poke fun at it? Where's their humor, for God's sake? They picked on such puerile things to say. 'Brando is wooden' — but that's just the whole point."

"I think it's the best thing I've done. I can be more objective about it than the pictures I've acted in, which can be very irksome and give me terrible inferiority complexes."

"It's full of invention, which I always like, and though it seems to be very simply constructed it took a long time to motivate it, to work out the cause and effect."

"And it has great charm — what more do they want? Things like The Gold Rush — one two three, pantry cakey — it's so easy."

"A situation comedy like The Countess is much more difficult to keep going. And I've never done anything as funny as the valet Hudson. We took three weeks working out the fight scene in City Lights, and it was technically good — but it wasn't as funny as Hudson."

"The humor of The Countess may not be mechanical, but the situations are exasperating. The critics now are terrified of being old-fashioned. But this picture is 10 years ahead of its time."

"I think it's the first time it's ever happened — a realistic treatment of an incredible situation. That was the thing that excited me."

"At first Brando was frightened of a funny part, but I told him not to worry as the character was meant to be humorless. And Sophia does a little quiet clowning. She wanted to be much more facetious, but I said give the audience a treat, let them do some of it for you."

"At first, when I read the reviews, I wondered. Then I went again the next day, and regained all my confidence. Because the audience were loving it."

"It was such fun to do. I thought the whole world was going to go mad over it. But I always seem to get back of the wrong end of the stick."

Foster Child Spells Out His Feelings

By NANCY BROWN

Foster children want the chance to "sell themselves" to prospective parents and so prove that "we're really not devils."

Twenty-one boys and girls spelled out for welfare administrators, foster parents and child welfare agency officials Saturday how they feel about the child care programs in the province.

They were taking part in a government-sponsored seminar aimed at improving the program.

PUBLIC OPINION
Social workers, foster parents and public opinion were all criticized.

Realizing the shortage of homes in the province, they suggested they should attend meetings of prospective foster parents.

"Perhaps if we could talk to people and let them see that we're just ordinary kids, we could get more homes."

GROUP IDEA

They asked for foster children's groups to be formed.

Within these groups they could help each other with mutual problems.

They also wanted to be put in touch with new children coming into care, and tell them what to expect of a foster home and also tell them what they had to offer.

NEED FACTOR

"We want people to take us because they need us, and because we can offer something."

They suggested, too, that a regular newsletter should be put out to keep the youngsters in touch with changes in department policy and with what the various agencies were trying to do.

Foster parents and social workers could be invited to group meetings, and spokesmen from the groups would be invited to foster parents' meetings.

ANOTHER BOY

Another boy asked for meetings between prospective parents and the child, with perhaps visits to the home.

"At the moment, we are just thrown in there cold, not knowing whether we can expect to live there for a couple of weeks or forever."

"It's a scary experience, and makes it difficult for us to feel free with the foster parents."

THEY'RE AFRAID

"We are afraid if we let down our defences and let them know us, they won't like us."

They criticized social workers, who they said were usually "too busy" to get to know the individuals on their case lists.

"What good is a social worker to you?" asked one young lady.

ONLY TIME

"The only time you get to see him is when you're in trouble."

"You don't know him well enough to talk to him or have confidence in him."

She said she felt at a disadvantage whenever she did see her social worker.

NUMBER ON FILE

"You're a number on a file to him. He's looked up your history and thinks he knows all about you, and you're supposed to fit in his little picture."

"Why waste your time talking to a social worker?" asked another foster girl.

"If you do manage to get in to see him, he says you have so many minutes — state your problem."

WHY BOTHER?

"It's that's the way he feels, why bother at all?"

"You have the feeling that if you cross him you're sunk."

At the close of the three-day seminar, foster children, parents and agency workers were given questionnaires and the replies will be used to draw up future department policy.

Apr 1's Fool Slightly Cool

MADRID (AP)—The weather and the date combined to give Madrid residents a rude April 1 joke. On the date when by law landlords may cut off all central heating in homes and offices, the temperature dropped to freezing. In Spain, central heating is compulsory only from Nov. 1 through March 31 regardless of the weather.

Souped-Up Drug Treatment

Some Progress Heard In Leukemia Struggle

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Significant results in the treatment of childhood leukemia by researchers in Texas and Pennsylvania were reported Saturday.

One method fights the almost invariably fatal disease by a "souped-up" drug treatment. The other is called by its researchers "amino acid depletion therapy."

Dr. Isaac Djerassi of Children's Hospital, Philadelphia, said the drug technique doubled the number of patients who survive an average of 17 months after treatment by conventional drug methods.

At Texas, a medical philanthropist and oilman J. K. Wadley said a Dallas researcher apparently had cured a nine-year-old boy with a "very advanced type of leukemia."

Wadley said Dr. Joseph M. Hill, working at the J. K. and Susan L. Wadley Research Institute, Dallas "starved" the malignant cells to death. He said the treatment attacked cancer cells without harming healthy cells.

Wadley, 90, said the boy previously was considered a terminal case with only a few weeks left to live but now, after treatment by Dr. Hill, all leukemia cells are destroyed.

Wadley, making the announcement during a luncheon celebrating his birthday, said: "Dr. Hill will not say this is a cure for cancer, and neither would any other scientist; but the results from this treatment are so fantastic that I do not know what could be classified as a cure if this is not one."

Tea-Time Big Break In London Explosion

LONDON (UPI) — Seventeen gasoline trucks at a pipeline terminal near London airport caught fire Saturday and exploded in a gigantic ball of flame. Thirteen persons were injured but no one was killed — apparently because most of the workers at the terminal were on a tea break at the time.

Four of the injured were in serious condition. The terminal was wrecked.

The pipeline brings gasoline in from Fawley on the south coast. The Esso Petroleum Co., an affiliate of Standard Oil of New Jersey, holds tank trucks at the terminal to carry oil products to the London area.

The 4,000-gallon tanker drive into bays in a 500-by-70 foot shed where they normally are filled by a computer system to expedite distribution.

TV Talks Continue

Executives March As Cameras Quiet

WASHINGTON (AP)—Executives of the three major television networks marched silently past their own cameras and microphones Saturday to talk with federal mediators and the union representing striking network newsmen.

"We're not commenting," said George Fuchs of NBC about the four-day strike which, among other things, split the NBC television news team of Chet Huntley and David Brinkley.

Brinkley is striking and Huntley isn't.

LITTLE MORE

Donald Conaway, chief negotiator for the striking American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, had little more to say than the management representatives of NBC, CBS and ABC.

After some three hours of preliminary meetings, Conaway, with a grin, described the tone of the talks as "mellifluous."

The meetings broke up for the day shortly before 7 p.m. and the federal mediators scheduled further sessions for 10 a.m. today.

NO LUCK

The networks have been using supervisory personnel on news and broadcast assignments and such nonmembers were the ones who had no luck in getting their bosses to talk.

A statement between the union and the Mutual Broadcasting System radio network was reached Friday night, but terms were not announced and there was no indication whether it might affect negotiations with the other networks.

The union is demanding $325

a week for radio-television newsmen, compared with the networks' $300 offer. The union also wants a higher percentage of commercial fees for the newsmen.

Meanwhile, the big three of broadcasting and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists began talking to each other again Saturday, at the insistence of the government, in an attempt to end the four-day-old strike.

Trucking Threat Cools Off

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chances for a contract settlement between the Teamsters Union and the trucking industry reportedly brightened Saturday, raising hopes of averting a threatened nationwide strike and lockout over wages.

Negotiators for 500,000 union members and 12,000 trucking firms worked overtime while a Teamsters strike vote began. But union officials appeared in no big hurry for authority to call a strike.

Rain in Aden

Floods Damp Terror

ADEN (AP)—The worst storm in living memory flooded Aden Saturday, bringing a temporary halt to terrorist activity.

The British port at the entrance to the Red Sea normally is lucky to get one inch of rain annually. Saturday, the streets were flooded to a depth of three feet and hundreds of shops and homes were inundated. Hundreds of Arab families fled their tin and cardboard homes, but no injuries were reported.

British troops who have been on standby alert, ready to combat a threatened resurgence of terrorism with which Arab nationalists vowed to mark the arrival of a United States mission to Aden, were switched to salvage operations, dragging military stores to dry ground.

The UN mission is due to arrive today.

Pupils Get Nootka History

B.C.'s historical beginnings around Nootka Sound are detailed in a brochure being distributed through all the province's school districts.

The brochure was created as a centennial project of the Tahsis Co. A total of 20,000 copies is being distributed, primarily for use in Grade 5 history classes.

Cowan

Pearson in Vancouver B.C. Separatism 'Irresponsible'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson said Friday night the Social Credit brand of separatism in British Columbia is irresponsible.

He told a Liberal party fund-raising dinner that it is "a basic belief" to accuse the federal government of being unaware except through its western members of what is going on beyond Ontario.

The prime minister was apparently referring to recent statements in the B.C. legislature by Premier Bennett and members of his cabinet criticising Ottawa's financial assistance to the province.

"... Unfair depreciation of federal financial contributions and irresponsible talk that emphasizes division and separation is not good for any province, or for Canada," Mr. Pearson said.

B.C. SHARE
"We know in Ottawa that Canada needs British Columbia. But we also appreciate as I hope is the case in Victoria—that British Columbia needs Canada. We need each other because we are part of each other."

Mr. Pearson detailed that B.C. received $272,000,000 fiscal aid from Ottawa in the fiscal year ending March 31.

"As a result of these and other benefits from the Canadian government, I believe it can be fairly said that Ottawa is the silent, if not altogether suppressed, partner of Victoria in a good many programs intended... to help the people of this province achieve a better life."

"In approaching these federal provincial problems we should always remember that we are and must remain Canadians before we are anything else."

NAME CHANGE
He added scornfully the judge's family changed the name of King from Levi when it moved from Quebec to Ontario.

Mr. Cowan said French-Canadians are never satisfied.

"They never let up on their demands for more and more. It's no use to exert pressure on strong men. Of course, weak men will respond to pressure."

'French Never Content'

Grit Maverick Denounces Own Leader

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal maverick Ralph Cowan accused Prime Minister Pearson Friday night of making "false" statements and of being a weak leader who gives in to any extreme demand by French-Canadians.

The Toronto MP bitterly denounced his leader on a wide variety of issues in a speech to a local group calling itself the Canadian Bulldog party.

He said the Pearson cabinet does the bidding of 15 per cent of the population in implementing its bilingual program. French-Canadians were a minority of 30 per cent and only about half of them support the Liberal government.

Mr. Cowan, MP for York-Humber since 1962 and a frequent critic of the Pearson government, took sharp issue with a speech the prime minister made last year in which he said English and French are the official languages of Canada.

"This talk about two official languages is as false as a 35-cent bill."

LEGAL BASIS
He accused John Matheson, parliamentary secretary to the prime minister, of giving a "false answer" to a written question in the Commons last Oct. 5. The answer was authorized by Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Cowan had asked what was the legal basis for Mr. Pearson's statement that Canada has two official languages. Mr. Matheson replied that the basis was Section 133 of the British North America Act.

The Toronto MP said Section 133 limits the use of French to Parliament, the Quebec legislature and the federal and Quebec courts.

Turner

Tough Task?

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says cabinet sources indicate that John Turner, 37, federal minister without portfolio and acting registrar-general, will be named to head a new, toughened-up version of the department of the registrar-general.

Prime Minister Pearson announced revamping of the department, as a watchdog on consumer and corporate business, at a news conference in Vancouver Friday.

In a Vancouver story, The Star quotes unnamed cabinet sources as saying the new appointment for Mr. Turner will be announced next week.

What Heating Fuel Is Best for Your Home—Oil or Electricity?

Electric heat has been available for over 25 years for domestic heating but it still costs up to 100% more than oil.

Electric heat does not circulate the air in your home. It is, therefore, not as healthy for your family since they continue breathing the same stale air again and again.

Oil, on the other hand, is the only automatic heating fuel that has been developed and refined specifically for home heating. It provides an even heat throughout the heated area and it keeps circulating and filtering the air.

Why pay twice as much for less comfortable heat?

OIL HEATING ASSOCIATION OF GREATER VICTORIA

Jolly Green Jumper for Real

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department is having a bit of trouble keeping track of photographs of the jolly green jumper—the bottle-green uniform being tested for the day when Parliament authorizes armed forces unification.

A color shot of a uniform appeared in several Canadian daily newspapers Friday and Saturday described as the unification uniform.

At first the department was reticent, hinting that orders from Defence Minister Heleyer required a "no comment" to questions about the picture's authenticity.

LITTLE LATER

About 24 hours later, the department lifted the lid slightly. The published photo was the real thing. In fact, it was one taken by the department itself. After this tantalizing peek, the information did not go back on. Requests for prints of the picture were met with:

"When we have finalized plans for the uniforms we will provide full statistics, background and photographs."

ONLY TRIALS

"It is still up to the minister. These are still only trials, user trials."

"We can't say anything more at the moment."

Publication of the photo apparently sparked investigation of its source in the department, including screening of movie film of the green jumper's last public appearance a few weeks ago.

At that time, a series of official photos was being shot on Parliament Hill when reporters and photographers showed up. The three servicemen modelling the dress were covered with overcoats and whisked away in a service vehicle.

LONG RANGE

But not before CP photographer Peter Gregg got a couple of long-range shots in black and white of the jumpers and the flight.

Movies of the action apparently satisfied the department that it alone had authentic photos of the uniform. So it admitted the color shot was one of its own.

"It is a department of National Defence photo, taken some months ago of one of the uniforms being tested," a department spokesman conceded.

B.C. Executive Calls Critics Haywire

Penny Mine Stocks Win Strong Defence

By HARRY YOUNG

The president of one of B.C.'s mining exploration companies says the views expressed recently by New Democratic MLA Les Nimick, and part of an article here on the Vancouver Stock Exchange and the promoters are "haywire."

J. E. R. Wood, president of McKinnon Gold, told his shareholders recently he sees nothing wrong with the present setup in B.C.

He said there was a unique co-operation between the B.C. securities commission and the Vancouver Stock Exchange so the mining promoters "have as fine a group of men as one could wish for to operate under."

IN DEFENCE
In defence of the status quo he pleads, "We have an excellent community and atmosphere in which to finance new ventures, so let us not destroy it as has happened and is happening in other jurisdictions."

His special concern is about the standing of the Toronto Stock Exchange, which until just after the war was dominated by members of the old Standard Stock and Mining Exchange who "understood" the mining business.

'BLUE BLOOD'
Now the TSE is run by a group of what he called "bluebloods," and the decrease in sales and earnings is stated by the company to be reflected entirely in Dow products and the Quebec City incident.

He believes this is proof that the present B.C. system is sound, and should not be persuaded to follow the tougher lines now being taken in Toronto and elsewhere.

SICK, TIRED
"I am sick and tired with the points of view held by many of the so-called bluebloods of the financial community."

Mr. Woods gives a long list of successful mining operations which have been created by Canadian mining men from money raised through primary distribution of stock from the various stock exchanges.

He believes this is proof that the present B.C. system is sound, and should not be persuaded to follow the tougher lines now being taken in Toronto and elsewhere.

BEER SALES HIT
The unproved assumption that people lost their lives in Quebec City by drinking beer manufactured by Dow is continuing to hit sales of Canadian Breweries products in that area.

Consolidated sales of Canadian Breweries dropped by 4.7 per cent in the nine months ended Jan. 31, and the decrease in sales and earnings is stated by the company to be reflected entirely in Dow products and the Quebec City incident.

Net earnings of Canadian Breweries for the nine months period were $8,754,796 (32.03 cents) compared with $9,191,621 (33.88 cents) in the corresponding period of the previous year.

DEAL DEFENDED
Walter Eilers, president of Sileurian Chairman, who recently returned from holiday in Hawaii, has defended his company's agreement to hand over management of its Alice Arm molybdenum property to Bethlehem Copper.

Mr. Eilers said Bethlehem's proposition was a great deal better than the firm had received from three other major mining companies.

"Not only was it the best deal but it also meant that we were dealing with a Canadian company," said Mr. Eilers.

U.S. FIRM
The other negotiations had been made with U.S. mining companies. Mr. Eilers said Bethlehem had signed up Boyle's drilling company for a deep drilling program at Alice Arm as soon as the snow melts.

The initial holes this year will be alongside the high grade orebody which was probed as far as 200 feet in last summer's exploration work.

"We hope that the rich ore will be found to continue at depth," said Mr. Eilers.

One value in the high-grade section already outlined is estimated at $8,000,000 and $7,000,000 at present molybdenum prices.

In the deal with Bethlehem, Sileurian will have 35 per cent interest in a new company which will be formed if expectations are realized in exploration work to be financed by Bethlehem.

JOB FOR BECHTEL

Lorne Mining Corporation has appointed Canadian Bechtel as consulting engineers for its investigation program at the copper-molybdenum prospect in the Highland Valley.

The program involves underground testing and bulk sampling. Management of Lorne is held by Rio Algom, and Canadian Bechtel will work under the direction of Rio Algom engineers.

THREAT TO GAS LINE

A further delay to Trans Canada plans to build a new pipeline through the U.S. to serve eastern Canada has been threatened by Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha.

The U.S. firm has a counter-plan before the Federal Power Commission to buy Canadian gas at the Manitoba border and to see U.S. gas to eastern Canada at Sarnia, which it hopes will be accepted by the U.S. authorities.

EARNINGS IMPROVE
Improvement in earnings of Kelsey Hayes, one of the U.S. controlled auto parts manufacturing companies in Canada, are reported for the six months ended Feb. 28.

Net earnings rose to $465,680 (42 cents) from $254,174 (23 cents) in the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year. In the quarter ended Feb. 28, net earnings were $260,662 (24 cents) against $104,324 (9 cents) a year earlier.

EXPANSION PLANNED
Increased refinery requirements have caused Interprovincial Pipe Line Co. to plan expansion of its carrying capacity both in Canada and the U.S.

The National Energy Board has recommended for approval a program of $48,000,000 to make 15 separate loop sections of the line in Canada. In the U.S., Interprovincial's U.S. subsidiary plans to build 101 miles of 24-inch loop as well as 10 new pumping stations.

HUSKY WELL PREPARED
Husky Oil Canada increased its daily oil production by 27 per cent to 25,500 barrels, according to Glenn Nielsen, president, in the company's annual report.

He said Husky had acquired 1,000,000 royalty free acres around Lloydminster from Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas on a renewable 25-year lease. The deal will provide Husky with sufficient low-cost production of asphalt crude oil to last into the next century.

JAPANESE AGREE
The Japanese government has authorized an expenditure of $250,000 by the Furukawa Mining Co. of Tokyo for a diamond drilling program on the West Coast Resources Ltd. Oro Dora property.

The property near Greenwood is estimated to have indicated reserves of 45,000,000 tons of commercial copper - gold - silver ore, averaging .926 per cent copper, .024 ounces gold and .33 ounces silver.

Chrysler Lays Off 21,000 for Week

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler slashed 22,800 cars from its April production schedules, Friday, laying off 21,100 workers in five states for one week.

It was Chrysler's second major cutback of 1967 and the latest in a continuing series of layoffs in the entire auto industry as sales continue to drop.

The assembly plants to be affected and the number of men involved include St. Louis, 3,100; Los Angeles, 1,300; Newark, N.J., 3,800; Belvedere, Ill., 3,500; and Hamtramck, Mich., 5,900.

The workers will be laid off for five days at each of the plants.

Outdoors with Alec Merriman

World Your Oyster When Camping

There is a long stretch of good fishing water with a lovely picnicking and camping spot along the Oyster River flats, three or four miles in from Oyster Bay, midway between Campbell River and Courtenay.

At Black Creek, near the entrance to Miracle Beach Park, a road takes off to the left (as you drive from Courtenay) and this follows Black Creek for some distance until it ends at a beautiful private campsite on a lovely slow pool on the Oyster.

We haven't been up that road, but we will this spring. We saw this riverside campsite from the other (north) side of the river when we were on an exploration trip. To reach this north side you turn left (coming from Courtenay) soon after passing the Oyster Bay Resort and just where the old Iron River Logging buildings used to be. It is an inconspicuous turning.

From there it is 3.1 miles up the unused MacMillan Road. Iron River Logging Road, which features some terrible potholes and washboard, to a left turn which cuts back towards the river. Then the road is just an overgrown trail and willows and small fir flank the road and elap against your vehicle. With only 650 miles on our new Travel Wagon we cracked our west coast mirror on this road.

Just 7 miles past the left turn you come out onto the Oyster River flats at a junction. A sharp right turn for 3 miles takes you to an upstream river spot with a picnic site on a sandy pool, a little falls and some nice fishing water.

We intend to go back to visit this spot this spring or next September and maybe spend a day or two river loafing.

From this junction we took

Merriman photograph shows Oyster River canyon off straight ahead through a young pine forest to the river where we fished and hiked the river path downstream.

But first we drove along the road, straight ahead, for 1.6 miles to a turn-around where we left Gordy Lamont and Ed Ebert to follow another trail to the river and then fish upstream to meet John Ebert and myself.

From that turn-around it is .6 miles to the broken bridge over the Little Oyster. A road from the highway reaches this bridge, but you can't cross.

This is rough road with almost-ditches across it at times and it was on this road that we found how useful our limited slip axle (post-traction) was, as we just eased the car into the ditches and over without even a skid or a slip of the tires.

The big west coast rear view mirrors came in handy when we reached the broken bridge and had to back up some distance for a turn-around on the narrow road, with ditches on both sides.

You can park at the washed-out bridge and follow the trail for 200 yards down the Little Oyster to the junction with the Big Oyster where there is beautiful big water and a nice fishing rifle.

From the junction, with chest waders, you can walk downstream along the river, wading back and forth until you reach the highway bridges. But, since we fell in we have had enough wading in the Oyster for a little while.

There are no big fishing pools, as we know them in the Cowichan River, but there is some interesting water which holds fish at the right times.

Don't bother to fish the Little Oyster.

Back to the junction where we headed for the river.

You can fish upstream or downstream, but we decided to fish down to meet up with the rest of the party.

Even if you don't get fish, this is a lovely river just to walk along, nice sand bars, plenty of riffles, some deep runs and plenty of places to fish.

It is trout water as well as steelhead water and Ebert said June, September, October and November are the best trout months, and the Oyster holds steelhead until May.

After an enjoyable two or three hours on the Oyster River flats, we decided on a little sightseeing with Ed and John as guides.

Back on the Iron River Logging Road, we turned left to carry on from where we had turned onto the side road. We passed under the power line 1.3 miles along and then on our left was fine view of the Oyster River winding far below and the Forbidden Plateau in the distance.

Another 1.9 miles through forest plantation and we came to a junction with the Comox Logging Road. Another .3 miles along is another junction and again keep left and .3 miles further along is the bridge over the Oyster for a spectacular view of the Oyster River Canyon.

We went back to the junction and turned left onto the Comox Logging Road.

Thirteen more miles brought us to the junction at the Campbell River bridge.

Identical 19-year-old twins Larry and Gary Davidson, of 548 Toronto, were given identical fines by Magistrate Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre in central magistrate's court Saturday.

The brothers pleaded guilty to a charge of causing a disturbance on View Street Friday night and were fined $25 each.

Constable Ronald Stewart told court the two were asked to leave a teenage dance because of their boisterous conduct and, when outside the View Street dance hall, they ignored the constable's warning to stop shouting and go home.

As he imposed the fine, Magistrate St. Jorre observed that more than likely they were two kindred spirits letting off steam.

John Brennan, no fixed address, was sentenced to 21 days in jail after pleading guilty to a charge of vagrancy.

Court was told the accused was stopped by police while walking in the 600 block Esplanade about 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

He told police he had been released from jail the previous day and had no place to sleep. Magistrate St. Jorre suggested he visit the Salvation Army when he finished his term.

Our Principals

Better Teaching Leads All Goals

Jack Drummond, principal of Colquitz Junior High and for the past year president of the district's principals' association, carries one big belief through his daily work:

"We're not teaching math, or social studies, or literature, or whatever; we're teaching youngsters."

With this in mind, he is constantly striving for improved methods of teaching.

CITY NATIVE

A Victoria native, Mr. Drummond attended Oaklands elementary, Victoria High, Victoria College at Craigdarroch, then normal school. His university degrees came later, over a period of time.

His first year of teaching was spent at Port Renfrew, in a one-room school with 16 students from Grades 1 to 10. From there he came in to Royal Oak on West Saanich Road, teaching grades 6, 7 and 8 for three years.

THREE YEARS

Followed three years during the war with the Royal Canadian Navy as radio-artist, then it was off to UBC for his B.A. The next two years he taught social studies and was counsellor for Grades 10 and 12 at West Vancouver High, before returning to Victoria and S. J. Wilks.

In 1956 Mr. Drummond was named vice-principal of Colquitz, and stepped up to his present post in 1962. He still teaches guidance, in a school that includes 556 students in 30 divisions.

"Discipline" is a word used frequently by Mr. Drummond as he discusses his work—but it's not used in the sense of student-behavior. To him, discipline is more the application of a teacher to the manner in which he reaches his students.

GREATEST REWARD

Today, he finds his greatest reward in meeting students who, although never among the highest-achieving at school, have still applied what they learned to become successful in their chosen work.

Fishing and golfing are Mr. Drummond's primary hobbies when he can find time for them—and he follows with keen interest the activities of his son and daughter, now in Grades 8 and 10 in their schools.—E.M.S.

Trans-Canada Skate May Take 60 Days

By WAYNE THOMAS

"People climb mountains, fly around the world and through space — I'm going to skate across Canada," a not-so-modest Clinton Shaw, 25, said Saturday night.

"I love adventure, plus I want to be able to say I was the first to do something," was how the Calgary-born oil rig driller summed up his reason for roller-skating more than 4,000 miles.

Clinton, who has lived in Vancouver for the past two years with his wife and two young daughters, leaves Mile 0 on the Trans-Canada Highway at the bottom of Douglas Street sometime this morning.

Calling in at Expo 67, he expects to take 60 days to reach Mile 0 in Newfoundland.

Another Vancouver skater, UBC student Chris Price, 20, left a week ago last Friday, but Clinton expects to overtake him "somewhere on the Trans-Canada."

The six-foot, 1½-inch ex-footballer, who weighs 200 pounds, is a fitness enthusiast.

"I rarely smoke or drink, often skate four hours a day (he's been at it since he was five) and work out in the health spas," Clinton said.

Clinton, who tested Victoria's roads Saturday when his size 14-D custom-built skates arrived from Kitchener, Ont., expects the going to be tough, both physically and on his eight-wheeled transport.

EIGHT HOURS

"They're the best skates and boots available, costing well over $100, and I'm carrying spare parts," he said.

He plans to sleep eight hours a night and skate as much as possible during the day.

"The Malahat?"

"It's like an anthill compared to the Rockies."

"It's no trouble going uphill — only down," he said.

Provincial Elections Tory Hurdle

Leadership Candidates Tied Up

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Prospects of several provincial general elections this year are lending uncertainty to early stages of the race for the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party.

Backers of declared candidates and prospective entries report that commitments of support at the leadership convention in Toronto Sept. 6-9 are slow in coming.

Conservative Premiers John Roberts of Ontario and Robert Stanfield of Nova Scotia are expected to face their electorates this year.

Mr. Roberts has publicly ruled himself out of the federal leadership race. Mr. Stanfield is said to have done the same privately.

Duff Roblin, the third Conservative premier, was re-elected in a provincial election last year with a reduced majority. But he is reported by informants to have turned down an offer of support for the federal leadership of his party from Mr. Roberts and Mr. Stanfield.

Nevertheless a certain amount of favorite-son support for Mr. Roblin remains among Conservatives expecting to attend the convention as voting delegates.

So organizers for the other candidates have been trying to nail down second-ballot pledges of support or conditional promises of support if Mr. Roblin refuses a nomination when the convention convenes.

William Davis, Mr. Roberts' youthful education minister, is being touted as a possible federal leadership candidate. Expectation of an Ontario election, possibly in June, makes organizing for him difficult until it is seen whether he will run provincially or, if he does run, how he fares.

If Mr. Davis stays out of the federal leadership contest, he will be a prime target for leadership candidates seeking his support and that of his followers among Ontario delegates.

In Nova Scotia, if Mr. Stanfield goes to the polls in a provincial election, the federal leadership candidates probably will try to line up his backing at the September convention in return for helping him on the hustings.

And in New Brunswick, where Liberal Premier Louis Robichaud may also call a provincial election, the Conservatives are busy regrouping under their new leader, Charles Van Horne, a former federal MP.

Mr. Van Horne is said here to have incurred debts to federal leadership candidates George Hees and David Fulton for help in winning the provincial leadership and a recent byelection. Possible provincial elections in Alberta and Saskatchewan may affect the power struggles of Conservatives in both provinces as they battle Premier Manning's 32-year-old Social Credit administration in Alberta and Liberal Premier Ross Thatcher in Saskatchewan.

Western voting strength on the leadership appears to be fragmented at the moment.

It is being wooed by Mr. Hees and Mr. Fulton but also by favorite-son candidate Dr. Hugh Horner, MP for Jasper-Edson, Alta., and on behalf of Alvin Hamilton, MP for the Saskatchewan constituency of Qu'Appelle who is mooted as a dark-horse but undeclared candidate.

Torrey Canyon Warned —But Too Late to Turn

By COLIN FROST

LAND'S END, England (AP) — The Seven Stones Lightship is a squat red vessel topped by a powerful flash.

The crew rides at anchor through the fiercest storms to warn against the Seven Stones Rocks, a reef off the southwest tip of England which has been notorious since the early days of sail.

Two weeks ago Sunday, around 9 a.m. the lookout saw a big red-and-black tanker heading north. Visibility was six to seven miles. The sea was moderate.

Not Enough Room

The lightship flashed a warning, but too late. Giant tankers need three miles to pull up, two miles to respond to the helm. The Torrey Canyon, ship and cargo insured at $18,200,000, drove on the rock at 17 knots.

The crunch of steel against granite pierced seven of her 18 tanks. Nearly 36,000,000 gallons of Kuwait crude oil started spilling on to the sea.

The most expensive shipwreck in merchant history had begun. At first it didn't look too serious. The tanker, 35,562 gross tons and 974 feet long, was planned on the rocks by the bows but kept an even keel.

Her Italian skipper, Pasquale Guglietti, 56, had been in these waters before.

Lifeboats set out for the reef but the captain and his 35 crew members stayed aboard the tanker, hopeful that powerful ocean tugs, alerted by the captain's call, could pull them clear if their own engines failed to do the job.

In the fishermen's puns of Cornwall's tiny harbors, people shook their heads. Only once in memory had any ship hit Seven Stones and survived.

By next day, with the seas steadily rising, all but the captain and three of his officers were brought ashore.

The smell of leaking oil drifted to the mainland 12 miles away. By nightfall, oil was spreading in a chocolate-brown stain, thinning out at the edges into a shimmering blue. It drifted toward the beaches of the Cornish rivers, England's main summer playground.

By next day, with the seas steadily rising, all but the captain and three of his officers were brought ashore.

The Torrey Canyon, although visible from the cliffs of Land's End, was technically on the high seas. Her fate rested with her American owners and a Dutch salvage company hired to move her. For the British to act at this stage would technically be an act of piracy, officials argued.

But anything less looked like procrastination. The situation held no political dividends for Prime Minister Wilson.

Orders went out for detergents to spray oil patches and damaged beaches. Royal Navy ships and trawlers were fitted with makeshift sprayers, finally abandoned in favor of dumping detergent by the barrel.

On the beaches, troops and volunteers scraped and sprayed. At Marazion, opposite Cornwall's celebrated St. Michael's Mount, housewives spread the detergent with watering cans and even kitchen jugs.

By March 21, the Dutch Wismulder Co., had assembled four ocean tugs and 100 men to run the salvage effort.

Wilson set up a series of committees to look into possible causes and the likely effect of the oil and detergent on marine life.

The commonest idea, and superficially the most practical, was to bring the smaller tankers in two just forward of the wheelhouse. Seas swept into her forward tanks, then streamed out of her bare intestines with an explosion of spray.

Oil stretched to the horizon. A decision to bomb was made by Home Secretary Ray Jenkins, named co-ordinator of the military and civil battle against the oil.

By that time the Torrey Canyon had split into three parts. Tuesday afternoon, the navy bombed the tanker, but the Torrey Canyon — named after a California oil well that founded the fortune of her American owners — was a long time dying.

Shipyard Loan Returned

New director of the defence department's shipbuilding branch production is Alistair William Allan, 39, who left a Victoria shipyard on loan to the federal government 14 years ago.

Mr. Allan was a drafting engineer at Yarrows Ltd. when he was called to Ottawa for one year. The loan period was extended to three years and his appointment was made permanent at the end of that time.

Mrs. Allan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Little of 144 Beach Drive. The Allans have three sons.

Victorian Wins Golden Gavel

Graham Thomson of Victoria Toastmasters Club 398 won the golden gavel contest competing against seven other finalists in the St. John Ambulance auditorium Friday night.

Speakers addressed a crowd of more than 300.

In second place was Jennifer Jones of the Arbutus Toastmasters Club followed by Joseph Presseau, of Toastmasters Club 38.

It's a good feeling alright. This boy's savings are stashed away in one big lump sum. And his savings are all profits from his newspaper route.

Of course, he's free to spend it any way he'd like. But by now he knows the value of a dollar. He's saving this money for college. Smart move, Buster. (You can understand why he has such a smug look on his face.)

If you're a boy 12 or over and would like to have the responsibility of your own newspaper route, sit down and talk it over with your parents. See if you aren't capable of going into business for yourself as a newspaperboy.

And if you feel you are, just mail in this coupon.

In Continental League Gamble

'Football Nuts' Risking Everything By Austrian Star

SAN JOSE, Calif. (CP)—Fifty West Coast businessmen, "most of us football nuts," are plunging boldly into the professional game with high hope that in five years their new Western Division, Continental League, will be a profitable venture.

Until then, they say, they're prepared to fight for their financial lives.

Division President Peter C. Murphy of Eugene, Ore., and Executive Director Danny Hill in San Jose headquarters told about it at a news luncheon.

"We're all dreamers," said Murphy, a hard-muscled, 6-foot, 180-pound, 30-year-old logging company executive. "We have to be. The fans won't come to us; we have to take the game to them."

Co-owner C. J. Chuck Treadway of the San Jose Apaches chimed in, "We hope to appeal to the laboring man. We think it's he and his family who will make or break us."

San Jose, in a one and one-half million population centre, is less than an hour's drive from the San Francisco area of the National Football League and the Oakland Raiders of the American League.

FAMILY PLAN

Murphy, who co-owns the Eugene, Ore., Bombers, tried the family plan with great success last year in the Pacific Professional League and averaged 8,500 fans at home games. He sold family season tickets—two adults and all the children they brought—for $25. He'll do that again this year.

He estimates the teams can break even with 7,500 average paid attendance.

Single admission prices will range from $3 in Eugene, San Jose and some other cities to $5 in Seattle and Portland.

The others are Victoria, B.C., Sacramento and Orange County, Anaheim, Calif. and Phoenix, Ariz. All but Phoenix and Orange County played in the Pacific Coast or Pacific Professional leagues last year and have a nucleus of players.

Other players will come from colleges, high school players not going to college, the semi-pros and a good many who couldn't quite make it in the NFL or AFL.

STEPPING STONE

The Continental League (Connie) hopes to be a big stepping stone for players into the big leagues.

Connie hopes to effect a working agreement with the NFL and AFL. Murphy and Hill fear anti-trust laws would prohibit a farm system similar to that in baseball, but hope to effect a working agreement. Connie commissioner Sol Rosen already has conferred with Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the majors.

Treadway has suggested the West Coast's big leagues—the 49ers, Raiders, Los Angeles Rams and San Diego Chargers—set up a pool of players who didn't quite make it with them and let Connie-West draw from it. Those players would be close to their parent clubs and subject to quick recall.

What's in it for the players? Connie-West is going about organizing like true semi-pros. It's offering minimum guarantees of $25 to $50 a game, plus jobs in or near the home city—plus a "big share" of profits, if any, at season's end.

DESERVE SHARE

"The players deserve a good share of the profits; they're largely responsible for them," he explained. "We want our men anxious to play for us."

Hill, a former director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association service bureau, said players in the new two-year-old Connie Eastern Division averaged $4,500 last season—or $300 a game.

Each team will suit up 35 players, with five more permitted under contract and available in case of injury.

Just as in the semi-pros, most clubs will be owned by businessmen in a community-style venture. For instance, Seattle has 15 owners. San Jose 12 and Victoria 10. Phoenix has one, William Winterble.

Among team owners are stockbroker, an attorney, a builder, a speedway promoter, a mortgage broker, restaurateur, car dealers and a former pro boxer-wrestler.

Players will have regular jobs and will train and practice nights. They'll play a 14-game schedule—7 on the road—starting the final weekend in August. Their finale will be a league championship game between Western and Eastern winners Dec. 9 or 10.

PAID WEEKLY

They'll play two or three pre-season exhibitions and expect two Eastern teams to come out to train and play.

Players will be paid weekly, thus no club can get far behind in salaries. Each team has put up a $25,000 performance bond. Each club has paid $15,000 into the division travel fund and $5,500 to operate the division office.

Connie West will operate a travel pool in what Hill calls a "playback operation." When the schedule sends northern teams south, or vice versa, two squads will share a plane. For instance, Phoenix and Anaheim—or Sacramento and San Jose—would fly together to Victoria and Seattle or to Portland and Eugene, on the same weekend.

The schedule is causing a few headaches. Connie-West doesn't want to interfere with—or contend for—prime time of either college or pro sports, which dominate the weekend from Friday through Sunday afternoons. How about Sunday evenings? Connie may try that.

TV REVENUE

Connie-West has some hope of television revenue, but isn't counting upon that this season. Connie-East was aired last year through the Overmyer Network, since sold to United Television, Inc. Murphy and Hill are having exploratory talks with United TV President Oliver Tryps.

Coaches? Several jobs are open but Eugene is happy with Jack Crabtree, Most Valuable Player in the '54 Rose Bowl though his Oregon team lost to Ohio State, 10-7.

Connie-West is entering the pro sports world hopefully, confidently on a long range basis, but prepared to fight for a share of the sports dollars.

"It will take tremendous effort, especially in Portland, Seattle and Anaheim," which are near major league cities, or seek big league franchise, Murphy warned Western Division directors.

In Murphy the league has a young, determined, aggressive president who looks hard. He keeps that way with his logging and road construction business. For leisurely exercise, he golfs.

Second division matches have Victoria West playing Colony Inn at upper Topaz Park; London Boxing Club meeting Gorge FC at lower Topaz; Island Tug at Sidney and Falcons tackling University Norwester at Gordon Head Campus.

All games start at 8 p.m.

Steelers' Fate Still Uncertain

Victoria will know within the next six weeks whether it will have a football team in the promising Golden West League, the Western Division of the Continental Football League.

Meeting at the Red Lion Inn yesterday, directors of the Victoria Steelers decided to get started immediately on a drive to sell season's tickets.

Steelers have until some time next month to post a $25,000 performance bond and have a budget of $100,000 to meet for the season.

NEED POSITIVE RESPONSE

Directors agreed that it was obviously impossible to sell $100,000 worth of season tickets within six weeks but decided that it would be possible to carry on with plans for the season if they get a positive response from city fans between now and mid-May.

"We can't decide that Victoria isn't going to get its chance to play in this league," general-manager Pat Frummen-told the directors. "We have to give the fans a chance to decide if they are willing to support the kind of football this league will give them."

TO GET STARTED

It was then decided to start a fund-raising campaign as well as a season-ticket drive and the executive committee will meet again today to get things started.

Season tickets for the seven games scheduled at Royal Athletic Park will cost between $14 and $28 each and fans will be asked to pay a minimum deposit of $10 per ticket.

Response to the season-ticket drive will be what will eventually decide whether Victoria will pick up the franchise it was granted earlier in the year.

FRANCHISE IN BALANCE

If the response is good, and good means at least $50,000 in pre-season sales, the Steelers will be able to carry on. If support is not forthcoming, Victoria will have to yield its franchise with little likelihood that it will ever get another chance to be a part of the Continental League.

Should the drive fall, season-ticket subscribers will have their money returned. It will be held in trust until the final decision on the future of the Steelers is made.

Soccer Wests Advance In Cup Play

VANCOUVER—Victoria West of the District Soccer League first division advanced to the Province Cup sixth round Saturday defeating Vancouver Glenavon, 1-0.

Wests had difficulties with the hard dirt pitch at Callister Park but Mirza Dilan scored after 15 minutes of the second half to provide the only goal.

Goalkeeper Don Head kept the game from going into overtime with a spectacular save late in the game.

Channels 6 and 8 will show the taped match today at 11 a.m.

O'Keefes Stay in Charge To Blank Game Scottish

Frank Grealy experimented freely in Saturday's exhibition soccer match while Pacific Coast League Champions O'Keefes defeated Canadian Scottish of the district league, 4-0.

Grealy's O'Keefes showed some effects of a team party the night before but still managed to dominate the match played before 350 fans at McDonald Park.

Although there was a great deal of soccer experience on the field, the best plays came from a pair of junior-aged goalkeepers.

GOALIE A STANDOUT

Kjeld Brodsgaard performed well under almost steady O'Keefe pressure to keep Scottish from receiving a thrashing. He made two sparkling diving saves in particular, cutting off Dave McCaig's cross to Jim Menzies in the first half and taking the ball off Joe Alexia on a breakaway.

Jerry Lister played a confident game for O'Keefes, robbing

Pratt Van Doornburg and Tony Quinn, game standouts for the losers.

Better make that three rookie goalkeepers, Veteran fullback Len Anderson played well after relieving Lister.

McKAY GOT FIRST

Dixie McKay scored the first goal, following up to tap in Peter Brett's rebound and Brett followed with a header from Dave Stoddard's cross to make the score, 2-0, at the half.

Bill Hamilton, moved up to centre forward scored both second half goals, the first on a play from Jim Menzies and Bert Souter and the second from Menzies as well.

Scottish were bolstered with the additions of Ernie Eastlake and John Omondson of Tully Ho and Robb Snow and Gil McIlwraith of Red Lions.

O'KEEFES ON ROAD

O'Keefes complete their regular season schedule next Sunday in Vancouver against North Shore Luchies. Fans wishing to accompany the team should contact Fred Magee at 383-3303 or Charlie Lewis at 384-2917.

Six district league matches are scheduled for today.

Headlining the day is the University of Victoria Vikings game against Hourigan Kickers at Heywood Avenue Park. A win will push the Vikings one point ahead of the idle Scottish in the race for first place in the first division.

GORGE FACES LUCKIES

Gorge Molsons and Luckies close out their seasons at Central Park in the other first division match.

Stockton Erupts To Catch Archer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Dave Stockton shot 19 threes in a third round 65 Saturday to tie George Archer for the lead at 138 in the $125,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Archer, the 36-hole leader,

Woman Fires Hole-in-One

Sylvia Brown scored her first hole-in-one recently when she found the cup with her drive on the second hole at the Victoria Golf Club. She used a No. 5 iron.

Playing with Mrs. Brown were Mabel Osborn, Juanita Wheaton and Renee Robbins.

shot 65 in a head-to-head battle with his fellow Californian that ended with each 14-under-par and two strokes under the old record for the three-quarter mark.

A Greensboro record gallery of about 20,000 swarmed over the Sedgfield Country Club course in 64-degree temperature to see the two West Coast youngsters steal the play from their more celebrated rivals.

Going into today's final 19 holes and the battle for $25,000 top money they were six strokes ahead of their nearest rivals—Arnold Palmer, Doug Sanders and Johnny Fott.

Canada's lone entry, Wilf Homeniuk of Winnipeg, carded a 69 Saturday and had a 211 going into today's final round.

Our Nancy Upset By Austrian Star

TAHOE CITY, Calif. (UPI)—Heidi Zimmerman of Austria sprang an upset Saturday at the Far West Kandahar ski meet by defeating Canada's great Nancy Greene in the regular slalom.

The Austrian star whipped through the gates twice in an unofficial combined time of 1:58. Miss Greene, who won the world slalom cup last weekend at Jackson Hole, Wyo., followed in a time of 1:54.

Austrians grabbed the first and third places in both the men's and women's competition.

Karl Schranz, Miss Zimmerman's countryman, took the men's title in an 88.66 clocking followed by Jimmy Heuga of Tahoe City with an 88.67 and Werner Bleiner of Austria who had 80.85 for third spot.

Gettrude Gabl of Austria placed third to Miss Greene with a 72.67 in the women's race.

Scott Henderson and Rod Helms of Canada finished fourth and fifth among the men while Penny McCoy of Mammoth Mountain, Calif., and Wendy Allen of San Pedro, Calif., took fourth and fifth among the top girl finishers.

Andretti's Team Wins at Sebring

SEBRING, Fla. (AP)—The Ford team of Mario Andretti and Bruce McLaren flashed to a record-shattering 60-mile victory in the 12-hour Sebring endurance car race, but a controversy developed over the second-place finisher.

Another Ford, piloted by A. J. Foyt and Lloyd Ruby, had a commanding second-place advantage when its engine froze and it had to go into the pits with 23 minutes remaining.

When Foyt brought his car into the pits, it was 25 minutes ahead of a third-place Porsche.

HEALTHY LEAD

A rubarb immediately developed over whether Foyt's car would be awarded second place. Efforts by his crew to revive the car failed. And some officials thought Foyt would not be given second place unless he got his car back onto the track under its own power.

Driving a bright yellow Mark Four prototype, Andretti whizzed across the finish line two laps ahead of the second Ford factory car and 11 laps in front of the Porsche.

For the first eight hours of the grueling race, two Chaparrals from Texas duelled the Fords at record-breaking speeds. But the brutal pace killed off the Chaparrals. And they were forced out of the race with mechanical difficulties.

The lap record for the tortuous Sebring course was broken six times, three times each by McLaren and England's Mike Spence in a Chaparral. Spence turned in the fastest lap time, better than 111 miles an hour.

GLOWN DIFFERENTIAL

The cars driven by McLaren and Spence swapped the lead five times and were rocketing along in the same lap when a blown differential seal sidelined the Chaparral. Minutes later, the second Chaparral went out with mechanical troubles.

The victory moved Ford into the lead in defence of its world sports car title.

A provisional order of finish issued one hour after the race placed the Fords first and second. A Porsche driven by Gerhard Mitter of Germany and Scooter Patrick of Manhattan Beach, Calif., was placed third. Hans Herrmann of Germany and Jo Siffert of Switzerland was fourth.

A Ford GT40, driven by Umberto Maglioli and Nino Vaccarella of Italy, finished fifth. Then came two more Porsches.

Pace-Setters Stay Up There In English Soccer Scramble

LONDON (CP) — The top five clubs maintained the First Division places in Saturday's English League soccer matches.

Manchester United and Nottingham Forest, the two leading clubs, both won handsomely, 3-0 and 3-1, respectively. Leeds United and Tottenham Hotspur, their most likely challengers, also gained maximum points.

Liverpool, the reigning champion, although defeated 2-1 by Tottenham, maintained third place with 46 points. Liverpool has lost its vital spark in recent games.

Its chances of retaining the title seem slender compared with those of Manchester United with 51 points, or Nottingham Forest, with 49. Leeds and Tottenham both have 45 points.

In Scotland, Celtic, European Cup semi-finalists, was held to a goalless tie by Clyde in the semi-finals of the Scottish Cup. Aberdeen made certain of its place in the April 23 final by defeating Dundee United 1-0 in the other semi-final.

Liverpool, which was without its injured star centre-forward, Ian St. John, could not hold a lively Tottenham team which has not lost at home since Nov. 14.

England manager Sir Alf Ramsey probably pencilled in Jimmy Greaves for England's Nations Cup qualifying game with Scotland in two weeks time after seeing Greaves score two fine goals.

Greaves' first goal came direct from a corner in the 42nd minute and the second in the 52nd minute with a lob over the goalkeeper's head from the edge of the penalty area. Peter Thompson scored for Liverpool 11 minutes from the end.

A crowd of 61,000 saw England international Bobby Charlton put Manchester United ahead in the second minute against West Ham United. George Best and Denis Law added the other goals in the game's final three minutes.

COTLED GO DOWN

Nottingham Forest, whose remaining six matches in the program look easier than those of the club, was always in control against Southampton, whose defeat took it nearer to relegation to the Second Division.

Mike Keen, John Brindley and Ian Moore were Nottingham scorers before Ron Davies replied for Southampton in the 88th minute.

Leeds and Chelsea had a tight struggle which was dominated by defence. Leeds' winning goal came in the 57th minute from an overhead kick by Peter Lorimer from 30 yards out.

At the other end of the table, West Bromwich Albion kept alive its hopes of escaping relegation when it beat last-place Blackpool 3-0.

Wolverhampton Wanderers, which leads the Second Division, was held to a 1-1 tie with Millwall when Derek Dougan scrambled the ball into the net with almost the last kick of the game.

Nuxhall Quits After 23 Years

TAMPA (AP) — Pitcher Joe Nuxhall announced his retirement from the Cincinnati Reds Saturday, 23 years after he became the youngest player ever to appear in a major league baseball game.

Nuxhall, who will be 39 on July 30, was only 15 years old when he pitched two-thirds of an inning for Cincinnati on June 10, 1944. He had to get permission from his mother and high school principal for his 1944 debut.

With tears in his eyes, Nuxhall told a press conference he's retiring to join the Red's play-by-play broadcasting team. He also will become associated with a Cincinnati brewery which sponsors the radio broadcasts.

"I always gave the game everything I had," he said. "I'm sorry my record is not better, but I'm proud of it."

His lifetime record in up-and-down career shows 135 victories, 117 defeats. His 130 victories for the Reds makes him the sixth winningest pitcher for the club.

Manager Dave Bristol said "It's tough to see a guy like Joe go." Nuxhall had a chance to become the team's fifth starter this year, Bristol added.

Nuxhall did not become the outstanding pitcher which many persons thought he would, but he had his moments of glory.

In 1955, he led the National League in strikeouts with five, and his 17-12 record that year was tops among left-handers.

In 1962, nearly forgotten after some lean years, Nuxhall amazed everyone with a great comeback.

After being traded in 1961, the Reds got him back near the end of the 1962 season and Nuxhall won five games while losing none, achieving a 2.45 earned run average, his best ever.

With Old Cartel Favored

Masters Set to Go

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus is having trouble with his big drives and Arnold Palmer is fretting with a cold putter but they're favored at 6-1 each in the 31st Masters Golf Tournament — an event they have dominated for the last 10 years.

A reduced but classy international field will try to crack this two-man cartel in a four-day, 72-hole test, starting Thursday over the beautiful but beastly Augusta National course.

The hand-picked field includes

51 leading U.S. professionals, 10 U.S. amateurs, 19 pros and four amateurs from foreign lands, making a total of 84. This is 19 below the 1966 starting field of 103.

Since 1958, the Masters has been more or less the private property of Nicklaus, the 27-year-old Californian rated consistently the game's longest hitter, and the 37-year-old Palmer, who has given Augusta galleries some of their greatest thrills.

WON FOUR TITLES
Palmer has won four titles more than any other—in 1958, 1960, 1962 and 1964. Nicklaus has won three—1963, 1965 and 1966—and set the scoring record of 271 two years ago and last year became the first player to repeat as champion.

Rated behind Palmer and Nicklaus in the unofficial odds are the reigning U.S. Open champion Bill Casper and Doug Sanders, who plays his best in the spring. They are bracketed at 8-1.

Gary Player of South Africa, who won in 1961 when Palmer double-bogeyed the final hole, is a 10-1 choice along with Julius Boros, the two-time National Open champion, and Gay Brewer, who went on a birdie binge last week at Pensacola.

Bob Gashby, Phil Rodgers and Bruce Devlin are 12-1, followed by George Knudson of Toronto, Bobby Nichols, Ben Hogan and Sam Snead at 14-1.

STRONG AMATEURS

An amateur has never won the Masters — the tournament conceived by the greatest amateur of them all, Bob Jones — but the amateur threat never has been stronger.

The list includes Bobby Cole, the British Amateur king from South Africa; Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., holder of the U.S. championship; two-time American winner Deane Beman and young Ron Cerrudo, a member of the World and Walker Cup teams.

Some changes have been made since last year in the 7,344-yard, par 71 course, but it still favors the hooker and the long-hitter.

Palmer is a hooker. Nicklaus a hitter.

Tiny Incident Snowballs

Anti-Immigrant Fury Rages in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG (UPI)—When Benvenuto Pino left his native Italy and settled in South Africa he was looking for a quiet life and a chance to prosper at his trade as a hairdresser.

Pino settled in Springs, a bustling industrial town 30 miles east of Johannesburg, and soon built up a faithful female clientele at the hairdressing salon where he worked.

There, he split the race-conscious country wide open, all because he didn't get along with Teresa Ackerman, an attractive brunette.

She was Pino's assistant. Her home language was Afrikaans, the language of the majority of South Africa's 40,000 white residents, and of 60 per cent of white South Africans.

Often, when relations between Pino and Teresa were strained, she would chatter away in Afrikaans to customers while Pino stood by seething, unable to understand a word. He began to suspect that his assistant might be talking about him to his very face.

"I will not have you speak that barbaric language in my presence," Pino yelled and slapped Teresa.

Teresa Ackerman filed a charge of assault against Pino. The magistrate decided it was a trivial affair, found Pino guilty, cautioned him and discharged him.

But instead of being the end of the matter, this was only the beginning.

The story of Teresa and Pino became front page headlines in the pro-government Afrikaans press. Teresa was interviewed and photographed, and awarded a heroine's medal by the Society for the maintenance of Afrikaans.

Pino's employer, upset by all the publicity, fired him, and he disappeared into obscurity.

Letters poured into Afrikaans newspapers airing the dispute. Most were strongly anti-immigrant.

A leading Afrikaans J. F. Du Toit, who heads the federal council of Afrikaans liaison committees, a right-wing politico-cultural organization, announced that in his opinion the government was allowing too much southern European "influx" to enter South Africa.

There were angry protests from representatives of immigrant groups. The opposition English-language press took up the cudgels on behalf of the immigrants — many of whom tend to flout the country's laws separating whites and blacks.

POLICY STANDS

Immigration Minister Alfred Trollop, one of the two English-speaking members of the cabinet, told parliament that the government stood by its immigration policy.

This policy has brought more than 180,000 new South Africans to this country in the last five years. It means that one in every 25 white South Africans today is a recent arrival. In the cities the proportion is very much higher.

PATTERN ALTERS

Ten years ago, two-thirds of the immigrants came from Britain and other English-speaking countries. More than two-thirds of the remainder came from Holland, Belgium and Germany, the three foundations of the Afrikaans nation.

Today, English-speaking countries provide only 45 per cent of South Africa's immigrants. Southern Europe, mainly Portugal, Greece and Italy, provides 25 per cent the three "fountain-head" countries account for only about 14 per cent of the total.

MANY TONGUES

Walking the streets of Johannesburg today, or riding its buses, there is no doubt about the immigration flood. In 30 minutes it is common to hear six or more different European languages being spoken, often far more common than it is to hear Afrikaans.

This is what touches a sensitive nerve in most Afrikaans. Immigrants rarely, if ever, speak Afrikaans. English is their second language, if it is not their mother tongue.

Even worse from the point of view of the Calvinist Afrikaaner, many of the newcomers are Catholic. In the dour, anti-ecumenical spirit of South Africa's Dutch reform Church the "Roman menace" is a very real issue.

Catholic immigrants are, to a large section of the Afrikaans, as great a menace as Communism or African nationalism.

But to the distress of the Afrikaaner, even the "assimilable" immigrants: Protestant Hollanders, Belgians and Germans, have shown contempt for the country's race laws.

It is in many ways an agonizing crisis that the Afrikaaner faces. He knows that he fought bitterly for his language and his national identity.

But he also knows that thousands more white South Africans are needed if the country is to progress economically — and if the whites are to keep pace with a spiraling non-white birth rate.

Reds Rehabilitate 'Nazi' Lindbergh

MOSCOW (UPI)—Charles A. Lindbergh has finally come in for a safe landing in the Soviet Union.

Ever since the late 1930's, Lindbergh, who made the world's first solo trans-Atlantic flight in 1927, had been branded a "nazi" in Russia because of a visit to Adolf Hitler's Germany where the Russians said he became "an advocate of German national socialism."

Now Lindbergh has been rehabilitated and given honorable mention in Soviet aviation circles and the reassessment could not have come from a better source—Gen. Alexander S. Yakovlev.

Centennial Project Starts This Week

Swim Pool May Trigger More Area Co-operation

By JIM BRAHAN

A major operation showing community co-operation comes to life Thursday morning when the first sod will be turned to start construction on the $231,200 centennial swimming pool at Colwood.

"Outside of our schools this is the first public building of any kind to be built in this area," says John S. Williams, the centennial pool commission's secretary.

"At 10:30 a.m. the ground will be broken to start what we hope will develop into a large recreation complex."

THE BEGINNING

"It may be the beginning of much future joint action among the people out in this area, because when the project is completed they will be able to see what can be done collectively."

Mr. Williams envisages that eventually the complex, to be located on the Old Island Highway southeast of Colwood, will also include a skating rink, bowling alleys and recreational facilities for senior citizens.

"These will all come in time."

STARTED WITH IDEA

Mr. Williams said the idea for the Olympic-sized covered swimming pool began two-and-one-half years ago.

"All we had was the idea. We then managed to acquire the property, and finally the voters from Langford, Colwood and Metsohain areas supported us at the polls in our referendum, and the idea was well on the road to reality."

He proudly points out taxpayer costs for the buildings and pool will be borne by Langford, Colwood and Metsohain ratepayers, although the pool will benefit Greater Victoria swimmers.

READY SEPTEMBER

A spokesman for Farmer Construction, which was awarded the contract, said the pool will contain about 640 yards of concrete, be 82 feet one inch in length and 44 feet wide.

The building will be of concrete block construction with a cedar shake roof. He said it is planned to be completed by Sept. 9.

TROUBLE AHEAD

A bid by commercial flower grower Geoffrey Vantreight to build a $1,500,000 high-rise apartment building in the Gordon Head area at Grandview Drive, immediately west of 1969 Grandview, is liable to run afoul of the Saanich planning department.

The municipal department has not studied the question yet, as it is still in the hands of the Saanich advisory planning commission, but a quick glance shows the proposed site to be a long way out from the planning department's proposal for land use in the Gordon Head area.

DIFFERENT AREA

The over-all plan for the area shows this type of development is suggested for the San Juan-Tindall area which is to the south of the proposed building site.

Mr. Vantreight plans a six-story building containing 97 suites with two penthouses. Saanich municipal planner Thomas Loney says there are technical difficulties with the site selected by Mr. Vantreight.

There is no drainage system in the area to handle this type of development, and also the water pressure may be inadequate.

UP TO COUNCIL

If council allows the high-rise development in this area the technical problems could possibly be solved, he said.

"This, of course, will all be up to the council."

The partly-constructed apartment building at Quadra and Topaz is still under negotiation between a prairie developer and a Victoria realtor.

No final decision has been reached on completion of the buildings, but if a settlement is made the developer hopes to have the apartments finished by the end of this summer.

Stamp Packet

By FAITH ANGUS

The Missions Stamp Outlet of St. Petersburg, Florida, has received a gift of what is considered by many to be the largest accumulation of its kind known.

There are approximately 250,000 British Colonials, South American and Asian stamps on paper and about the same number of off-paper adhesives. The latter however, are mostly of rather low catalogue value.

The late owner was an executive of a magazine with international connections and after his death the widow gave the lot to be used for missionary work for the Swedenborgian Church.

Car enthusiasts among the many local collectors of Monaco will welcome the forthcoming program: April 28, 1967, 25th Grand Prix Race; 1c. Bugatti 1931 racer; 2c. Alfa Romeo 1932; 5c. Mercedes Benz 1936; 10c. Maserati 1948; 15c. Ferrari 1953; 20c. Alfa Romeo 1950; 25c. Maserati 1951; 30c. Cooper Climax 1958; 40c. Lotus Climax 1959; 50c. Lotus Climax 1961; 60c.

Designs are by Minne, engraving by Maxell and Haley and recess printing by the Paris State Office.

Other new issues for 1967 are International Federation of Cynology Congress (dog fanciers) 30c Egyptian stone carving of a dog; International Tourist Year 30c view of Monaco; International Chess Grand Prix 60c, chess board and view of Monaco; 50th anniversary of Lions International 60c portrait of Melvin Jones, founder; and view of Monaco; Rotary International Convention 21-25th, at May; 10c. Rotary emblem; EXPO 67, 10c. French-Monégasque pavilion; meeting of Committee for European Migration ICEM, 10c. map of Europe; Europa 67, 20c, 60c, gearwheels design; definitive pre-cancelled 15c view of the Natatorium; all engraved or recess printed by the State Printing Office.

During April, four stamps will be released by Switzerland as a Protected State issue. Values are 2½c, 7½c, 15c, 25c in common design by Harrison & Sons who also will do the printing by photogravure, in sheets of 50 on CA Block watermarked paper.

Armored Truck,

Drinking Tests
Delayed

Although local municipal police forces had the right to use a new law empowering them to suspend a borderline impaired driver's licence for 24 hours from 12:01 a.m. Saturday, they did not.

It will be delayed until mid-night Wednesday to allow the four Greater Victoria police forces to introduce, simultaneously a sobriety test to motorists who are social drinkers and don't think they are a danger on the roads.

YES OR NO

Using a portable breathalyzer, a police officer or member of the attorney-general's department can get a quick yes or no answer if he thinks a motorist should not be driving.

No charges will be involved with the 24-hour suspensions, imposed by traffic officers if they decide a motorist is not capable of safe driving due to alcohol consumption.

Obviously impaired drivers will still be arrested, police say. The sobriety equipment was delivered to several municipalities Friday.

UVic Grad
Awarded
$7,200

Colin F. Crisp, a 1966 honours economics graduate of the University of Victoria has won a $7,200 scholarship toward his doctorate at Queen's University in Kingston.

Mr. Crisp, 28, won the university's McLaughlin Award, his family has learned. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Crisp, 530 Normandy. He attended Shawinigan Lake School and is a graduate of the navy's Venture program. He won his wings as a navy pilot and then enrolled at Uvic.

Child Hit
By Car

Three-year-old Diana Propp of 1215 Basil was knocked down by a slow-moving car near her home Saturday afternoon.

She was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital with head cuts and body bruises. Early this morning a hospital spokesman described her condition as satisfactory.

The car was driven by Spencer Dunaway, 1120 Topas.

QUINCY, Mass. (UPI) — Machine-gun wielding bandits hijacked an armored car carrying $1,000,000 from a shopping centre Saturday night. The truck was later recovered but it was not known how much money was taken.

Bloodhounds, floodlights and extra state troopers were called to help Quincy police comb a wooded area in West Quincy where the bandits were believed to be holed up.

Police found the robbers' getaway car abandoned in Quincy. Inside, police said, were two machine guns.

Police said the driver of the truck told them there was "a million dollars, more or less" in the truck. The truck was making its last stop of the day at Sandy's, a discount store, in Big Joe's shopping centre, when it was hijacked.

MONEY BAGS FOUND

The truck, according to police, was found abandoned less than a mile from the shopping centre. Police said there were money bags in the truck but it was not known how many.

Armored car guards fired at least two shots during the hijacking but no injuries were reported.

The truck was owned by the Skeels Detective Service of Fall River.

Fire Drills
At Hospital

St. Joseph's Hospital this week will offer a five-day series of lectures, films and demonstrations on fire safety.

The sessions are meant for employees and run for about an hour each day, Monday through Friday. Discussions will be on such topics as fire prevention and emergency removal of patients.

Armored car holdups are not particularly rare in the Boston area.

SIX IN 1966

In 1966, there were six such robberies in North Attleboro, Brookline, Concord, Bedford and the Jamaica Plain section of Boston. Bandits got $338,000.

In August, 1962, four men held up a mail truck in Plymouth, getting away with $1,550,000, the largest cash haul in the nation's history. No one was ever caught.

In 1950, the Brink's Co. counting house in Boston's North End was held up for $1,200,000.

Men Reject
UBC Parity

BURNABY (CP) — Maintenance men at Simon Fraser University have applied for a government-supervised strike vote after rejecting a conciliation board report offering them the same terms as the University of B.C. maintenance staff.

The SFU men asked for parity with Vancouver School Board rates, 70 cents above UBC rates.

Three Unions
— One Aim

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three unions, the operating engineers, tunnel and rock workers, and the teamsters, have applied to the Labor Relations Board to take over representation at the Enbridge pipeline mine near Fraser Lake. Certification at the mine is presently held by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union.

Cancer Drive
Opens

The annual fund-raising campaign of the Canadian Cancer Society was launched in Victoria Saturday. Campaign objectives for B.C. and the Yukon this year is $410,000. The national objective is $4,700,000.

"Every dollar that we collect over our campaign goal means just that much more effort can be put into the fight against cancer," said C. D. Wilson of Vancouver, campaign chairman.

Beast Bylaw Briefs
Must Be In Soon

Saanich officials hope all public comments on the municipality's proposed beast, bird and bee bylaw will be turned in before the end of this week.

All letters and briefs will be considered by planner Thomas Loney and his staff before they start preparation of the final draft of the bylaw.

Victoria Man Picked For Vimy Ceremony

A Victoria man is one of 70 Canadian veterans who will be in France April 9 to commemorate the battle of Vimy Ridge.

Col. William McMurray, 1677 Hollywood Crescent, will represent the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals at ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of the battle.

He was chosen by the department of veterans affairs. During the historic battle, he was with the Second Division Canadian Infantry Brigade and was mentioned in dispatches. During his career, he also won an MC and the OBE.

Apartment Plans Dropped

A firm of Vancouver developers is dropping plans for a $1,600,000 apartment complex between Shelbourne and Cedar Hill Road, just north of Ruby Road.

The decision to withdraw the bid, which is explained in a letter that will be read to Saanich council Monday night, comes after the proposal got a cool reception from nearby residents in the area.

The plan, proposed by Aceman Investments, was for 93 two-bedroom suites and 38 one-bedroom suites in structures of a maximum height of two stories.

A sister development, a $1,500,000 shopping centre, has got the green light from Saanich council's lands and planning committee on a vote of 5-3. However, it still has to be approved by a regular meeting of councillors.

Council on Monday night also is scheduled to receive from its advisory planning commission reports on these proposals:

• Commercial greenhouse at 5111 Patricia Bay Highway;

• Outdoor theatre in an area bounded by Patricia Bay Highway, Glenford Avenue and Raymond Street;

• Medium-density apartment at 3389 Glasgow Avenue and 3420 Quadra Street.

The commission is also reporting to council on a proposal to formally classify Fable Cottage, 5187 Cordova Bay Road, as a tourist attraction under zoning bylaws.

Council will decide if the applications should be sent to a public hearing for further discussion.

Ramblings of a Happy Man

Is this too simple? Two kinds of people: those who are happy, and those who are not. For those who are not and would be: First, why? Second, remove cause, or make adjustment. Third, Faith. And, oh yes, a spot of philosophy.

Chief Hot on Extras

By JOHN MATTERS

The statement is expected to be made by Fire Chief J. C. Sutherland when he presents his annual report to councilors.

Last year, a study of the citizens adequate protection.

THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST

April 2, 1967

Last evening we received upwards of 10,000 words by telegraph from New Westminster—the largest dispatch yet transmitted on the coast—comprising a report of the speeches on the Capital Question, that our reporter failed to prepare in time for the steamer.

The New Westminster operator, Mr. Bruckman, commenced sending at 7:30 o'clock and Mr. Henderson, at the Victoria end of the wire, received the last word of the dispatch at 11:45 o'clock. The cost of the dispatch to the office will exceed $100. Hon. DeCosmos' speech failed to reach us last evening.

The extraordinary result of the vote upon Dr. Helmcken's resolution, recommending the Governor to convene the next Legislature at Victoria, has taken everybody by surprise.

It is true, that the citizens of Vancouver Island were always confident that when the question of the Capital was fairly tested upon its merits that a sufficient number of votes would be found to favor the selection of this place as the seat of Government; but there was an expressed fear that pressure would be brought to bear upon the Government members to such an extent as to prevent the majority in our favor being anything like as sweeping as it has proved.

No one supposed that, in a House numbering 23 members, two-thirds of whom are officials, that 13 members would be found to cast their votes in favor of Victoria. The vote was decisive.

Sunshine, Warmth Draw Swimmers

Saturday's sunshine and warmth lured the young fry into the water at Witty's Lagoons, an Oak Bay housewife told The Colonist.

"It was beautiful out there," she said. "Many of the kiddies were paddling and romping through the shallow water, but there were three, two boys and a girl, aged 9 to 13, who had their bathing suits on and had a real swim."

The housewife, who said she preferred to remain anonymous, took her family to the beach for the afternoon.

"We didn't go swimming," she said, "but we came home with a great sunburn."

Governor-Star's Son

TV Prize Victoria-Bound

Michael Reagan, son of California's governor, will come to Victoria this spring with a girl who "won" him on a TV program Saturday night.

Mr. Reagan's date will be Cheryl Ullman, 20, a student teacher at the University of California in Los Angeles.

A spokesman for the program The Dating Game told the Colonist late Saturday that the chaperoned couple is expected to come to Victoria in "four or five weeks," staying for several days.

It might have been movie star Sal Mineo coming here instead of Mr. Reagan. Miss Ullman made her choice blind, on the basis of questions and answers with three men behind a screen.

The third man was UCLA football hero Norman Daw.

It was announced on the program that the couple will stay at the Empress Hotel, have lunch at Government House and attend a reception by the mayor.

"I know nothing about it," said Mayor Stephen. "But I'm glad they're coming and I'll do everything possible to make them welcome."

U.S. Philosopher Here Tuesday

The problem of personal identity will be discussed Tuesday at the University of Victoria by Dr. Roderick Chisholm of the philosophy department of Brown University in Providence, R.I. Dr. Chisholm, 1967 Carus Lecturer of the American Philosophical Association, will speak at 12:30 p.m. in the Education-Arts Building theatre.

Rescue in a Quiet Zone

Marigold Nine Guided to Better Life As Teacher Tries to Defeat Deafness

By BILL STAVDAL

All rescues are urgent but not all are dramatic. The one happening at Marigold elementary school is totally unspectacular. It's a life-saving operation of a quiet and special sort.

Each school day, teacher Margaret Hallam guides her class of nine hard-of-hearing youngsters toward a better understanding of the world around them.

With the help of an audiology therapist, some electric gadgetry and a bottomless fund of patience, Mrs. Hallam is trying to break through the deafness which isolates her children from normal life.

Without this help they would be certain to spend a frustrated half-life in near-total silence.

Proper Training

After the right kind of training a hard-of-hearing child can often be helped into the educational mainstream.

The worst thing about deafness in the young is that it isn't often recognized. The child doesn't realize anything is wrong with him, and parents can't tell.

So the infant doesn't hear; he doesn't learn to talk because he doesn't know he has a voice. All his parents understand is that their child seems retarded.

The tragedy is that countless children born with normal intelligence have been branded retarded. In fact, they often become retarded because the lines of communication weren't open.

Opening them to the world of sound is the job of Mrs. Hallam, assisted by audiology therapist Marjorie Frew.

"I'm sure they know more than they can ever communicate," says Mrs. Hallam, a pretty brunette who took the tough job 18 months ago, fresh out of teacher training.

"And there are so many million things they don't know—things every other child knows and takes for granted."

To make the initial breakthrough the silence barrier, the school district supplies hearing aids. They are back-up by a special intercom system with individual volume controls at each desk.

The system even provides for separate, left-and-right volume control so that each ear can do its best.

Overcoming hearing loss in the profoundly deaf involves more than just turning up the volume. Some of Mrs. Hallam's pupils can't hear the higher frequencies. They lose D's and G's, but can hear bass tones.

In many cases their problem wasn't diagnosed until school age, by which time they were far behind other children.

Sometimes frustrated, sometimes pampered, hard-of-hearing youngsters often become behavior problems. Mrs. Hallam's only complete failure was a child so hostile that he had to be removed for the safety of the others.

In the easy-going, family atmosphere of Mrs. Hallam's class, moods are ebbing and magnified. On a good day the place is boisterous; on a bad day Mrs. Hallam goes home exhausted.

Good days are happy times indeed.

"Sometimes I play away for days and weeks, trying to teach something to one of the kids," says Mrs. Hallam.

"Then all of a sudden, bingo! It gets through."

"The rest of the children come charging over. It's an accomplishment for the whole class."

"And then there are times when they shut you off—even with hearing aids on."

District superintendent Joseph Chell says the classroom at Marigold was deliberately made big to allow a feeling of roominess. The school district based its experiment on a successful one in North Vancouver.

The district is thinking of erecting a hard-of-hearing class at the kindergarten level but has no firm plans, according to Mr. Chell.

"All the medical authorities tell us the earlier you can get them, the better," says Mr. Chell. "But kindergarten is as low as we can go; there is no provision in the Public Schools Act for nursery schools."

Mrs. Hallam's room is full of odds and ends her children have brought to school. She herself, like many other teachers in a district lacking library books, has brought an armload of her own volumes to school.

Mrs. Hallam keeps boxes of junk which her youngsters enthusiastically turn into costumes for their impromptu skits. With an old pillowcase a boy can become a barber or an Arab within a minute.

Two members of the class attend arithmetic lessons in a regular class. With progress they may soon join a regular class on a full-time basis.

That's what Mrs. Hallam's class is all about.

Mayor Invites Public Help

Teen Study Begun

A special committee to study the problems of young people has been formed, consisting of the mayor and several of Greater Victoria municipalities.

"This community, like many others on the continent, must find an answer to the situation which confronts us," said Mayor

Hugh Stephen today in announcing formation of the committee. The mayor, on the committee's behalf, invited individuals and organizations to offer constructive suggestions to solve the problems of youth.

ANY ASPECT He asked them to submit information "on any aspect of the health, welfare and recreation of the youth of the community; on problems observed; and on the human and physical resources, available or lacking, which should be used to meet current needs."

"We feel that in this way the needs of the community in regard to our youth may be recognized and assessed with some hope of finding solutions."

IN WRITING The mayor said briefs should be submitted in writing to the executive director, of the Community Welfare Council, 1551 Cook Street by May 1.

"I urge all interested persons and organizations to contribute to this community effort, under your elected municipal leaders," he said, "to build a better environment for young and old alike."

Three Hurt Pursuer Turns Escort

An 80 mile-an-hour police chase early Saturday morning turned into an escort to Royal Jubilee Hospital when it was discovered the driver was carrying three people injured in a road accident.

Admitted with severe facial lacerations after the car they were travelling in crashed into a tree off Churchill Drive at 5 a.m. were car owner Michael Harriott, 30, of 4138 Wilkinson Road, Ervin Ray Beebe, 22, same address, and Linda Madson, 18, 4014 Wilson, who also suffered a badly crushed foot.

A Saanich police car spotted the speeding car taking the injured to hospital, and after stopping the car, gave it an escort to hospital with siren and flashing lights on.

The wrecked car skidded 100 feet on Churchill, went off the road and slammed head-on into a tree, causing the car to split in two.

The steering wheel ended up touching the roof and the dashboard was flattened across the front window. Investigating officers said they were amazed the occupants weren't more severely injured.

Telephone, Rifle Thief's Targets

A thief stole the telephone from a house at 977 Cowichan sometime last week while the owners were out of town. Also taken were a hunting rifle, a portable television set and $6 in cash. The loss was discovered Friday night when the owners returned.

Mattress Fire

Victoria fire department extinguished a mattress fire in a house at 1139 Mason shortly after 8 a.m. Saturday before any major damage resulted.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Walsh Married at First United

First United Church was the scene of a pretty wedding last evening when Linda Marie Spence was united in marriage with Mr. Donald Brian Walsh.

Rev. R. J. D. Morris officiated at the double ring ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Spence, Old West Road and the son of Mr. R. J. Walsh, Field Street.

Junior bridesmaid, Corinne Weeden, wore full skirted white dress trimmed in yellow and carried a basket of yellow daisies.

All the bridal gowns were made by the bride's mother and Mrs. D. Cook. Mr. Robert Allen was best man and showing guests to the pews were the groom's brother, Mr. Robert Walsh and Mr. Keller.

The reception was held at Holyrood House. The bridal toast was given by Mr. Robert Houston.

For a honeymoon on the Mainland the new Mrs. Walsh wore a pink wool boucle suit and pink accessories.

Diamond Ring Something Old

Her great-great-grandmother's diamond ring was the "something old" talker for Alice Adela Wheeler when she became the bride of John James Reid in the Church of Our Lord.

The bride's floor-length gown was of pure silk tulle with a full skirt extending in soft folds from a fitted Basque waistline. Embroidered appliques trimmed the skirt and the full train. The bodice was fashioned with a scalloped oval neckline which was outlined with Chantilly lace and pearl appliques. A Grecian-inspired headpiece, trimmed with the same lace shimmering with pearls, held her three-tiered veil of silk illusion net. Stephanie surrounded the orchid which she carried in her bouquet.

Floral arrangements in pink, white and mauve tones decorated the church when Bishop D. A. G. Ranklor heard vows uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richard Wheeler, 117 St. Lawrence Street, and the son of Mrs. N. Dixon, 673 McKenna Avenue and the late John Reid. Mr. Wheeler gave his daughter in marriage.

Deep mauve velvet ribbon circled the empire waistlines of the mauve organ gowns worn by maid of honor Mrs. James Gibson, bridesmaid Mrs. N. Gordon and bridesmaid Miss Merrill Reid. Their headpieces were matching flowers and they carried bouquets of pink and white carnations with mauve ribbon. Jewelry accents were the bride's gifts of sterling silver necklaces, started with pearls.

Best man was Richard Bradley and ushering the guests were Joe Churchill, Al Holgate and Gary Ralph.

Frank Anderson proposed the toast to his niece at the reception which followed in the Union Centre. The head table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake, made and decorated with pink and white roses by the bride's aunt, Mrs. C. Matte. Floral arrangements in the same color theme completed the table decorations.

The couple will be making their home at 230 Oswego Street, following a honeymoon trip motoring to San Francisco. For travelling the new Mrs. Reid donned a French imported ensemble of taupe boucle wool. The sheath dress was trimmed at the hem with lynx fur which was repeated on the cuffs of the tulle-length coat. She completed the outfit with a lynx fur hat.

School Music Festival

Arranged by Dorothy Wrotnowski
Social Editor

Greater Victoria Elementary School Orchestra with 40 participants from 13 schools will be among the competitors in the Greater Victoria School Music Festival to be held from April 10 to 21. Last year, their first, the group received an above-90 mark in the festival. In the age group of 10 to 12 years, 90 per cent have received their musical instruction entirely through the school program. On April 21, the orchestra will go to Kelowna for a performance. Mr. Bernard Rain is the conductor.—(Jim Ryan)

Victoria West with an enrolment of 600 pupils will have 468 performing in the dancing, composite choir and speech choir. Most are in the folk dancing classes. Pictured are members of a Grade 1 class doing a dance called Chimes of Dundalk. From left,

Frank Schultz, Bev Smith, Susanne May, Jan Wood, Greg Ottenbreit, Ron Watkins, Michael Kendrick, Elizabeth Horne and Anita Speers. Mr. R. Davison is the teacher training this group.—(Kinsman)

Cheryl Dolman, Cindy MacClean, Kathy Harrison, Kathleen Partridge and Gina Lindsay.—(Jim Ryan)

Cracknell, Maureen Allison, Linda Corbett and Margaret Willis.—(Kinsman)

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

Eye-catching knits for now and later . . .

It's getting so we're almost afraid to tell you about some of the stunning dresses we see at Madam and Eve earlier in the week . . . for fear they'll be gone by the time you read this! . . . Fact is, so many women with more taste than money are finding at M & E the sort of young, distinctive fashions they yearn for at prices they can afford to pay . . . that clothes move out of the shop even before they're nicely settled on their hangers! . . . Latest offerings are one-piece knit dresses . . . made in Italy and exclusive to Madam and Eve. High square necklines, little cap sleeves, tie belts. Winduppane checks in delightful colors like blue on green, lime on navy, mauve on pink, pink on pink, mauve on green, white on yellow . . . These dresses are especially good on taller girls . . . although they can easily be shortened . . . This is the type of dress you'll wear now and right through the summer . . . Sizes from 8 to 14 . . . and completely "right" for either Madam OR Eve! . . . Also knits . . . and from the same source . . . are three 2-piece suits, one navy, size 14 . . . a yellow in size 12, and a lovely mint green, size 10 . . . they're double-breasted with fully-lined skirts . . . A fourth suit, size 16, is navy with navy and white striped band around sleeves of the pullover top . . . matching separate Ascot scarf . . . And watch for the new Ribkoff and Jonathan Logan dresses . . . due in momentarily . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

The simoniz wax you use on your car makes an excellent furniture polish, we're told by a leading furniture store.

The shoes for smart, active feet . . .

Brevitt shoes are a gift from Britain we might well be thankful for . . . They're famous with women-on-the-go who demand high craftsmanship, coupled with style and comfort . . . Munday's are now carrying beautiful Brevitt shoes in six new and very smart models . . . They all have names, like "Pelham" . . . a pet of a walking or casual shoe in pastel blue, pale turquoise or beige suede with composition sole and flirty little tie bow . . . "Soft-Mac" has a moccasin-type vamp and leather sole . . . comes in beige suede and antiqued brown or black smooth leather . . . "Guthrie" has woven leather high vamp, slightly higher stack heel, and a pinky beige color . . . "Morden" with flat crepe sole, is a two-eyelid shoe of woven kid leather in tan or beige . . . Another two-eyelid tie is in tan smooth leather with ripple sole . . . this one's called "Raynford" . . . Radlett is the name of a leather-soled slip-on with stack heel and brogue toe . . . Comes in beige suede . . . All these Brevitt shoes have cushioned leather insoles, and are extremely comfortable . . . Best of all, they're outrageously smart . . . Prices range from $15.95 to $21.95, depending on the model . . . and right now there's a very good range of sizes . . . at . . . Munday's, 1200 Douglas St., 383-5111.

Voile predicts we'll be wearing sheer gold stockings next summer.

Leghorns for romance! . . .

The wheel has turned full circle! . . . Remember when a leg-horn or panama hat was a requisite of every woman who prided herself on being smartly dressed during the sunshine months? . . . We've always adored them . . . so we're delighted to see a profusion of absolutely delectable panamas and leghorns at Miss Frith's this week . . . There's a Christian Dior leghorn with wide roll brim surrounded with a profusion of field flowers that's the most romantic thing you ever laid eyes on . . . Another with wavy brim, dripping with green lilies of the valley . . . Lovely! . . . Leghorns are mostly talked styles, and very elegant . . . they're the real thing, from Ecuador . . . so are susceptible to cleaning and re-modelling later on . . . One dresier panama has looped straw forming a fringe around the brim . . . There's a toyo panama in black and white with petal trim that's very Dior . . . another white toyo circled with a veritable English flower garden . . . And a little white head-hugger we like has streamers of white and yellow organdy petals tumbling down the back . . . The popular coolie hats appear in many guises at Miss Frith's . . . one in shiny white straw with peacock-like crown is especially smart . . . And if you'd like a change of pace with a print hat . . . you'll find a great collection . . . in lilies, chiffons and other materials . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

The total impression of a woman is created not through the eyes alone, but through all the senses . . . including smell.

New coats are young and gay . . .

If you can resist the new coats just arrived at Wilson's, you're a better woman than we are! . . . Looking them over the other day, we gravitated first to complete coat and dress ensembles . . . which are double-duty really, because each can take on a new personality when worn alone, or in combination with other team-mates . . . Materials of each are different . . . but so combined as to blend into a harmonious ensemble . . . For the woman who wears a size 18, there's a handsome raw silk, short-sleeved dress in oatmeal shade, to be worn under a matching novelty-weave, full-length coat . . . A soft pink tweed dress and slightly bolder tweed coat is a size 14 . . . This one also comes in soft yellow . . . And in coats alone, there's a delicious buttercup yellow mohair . . . pink, blue or yellow mohair tweeds . . . Milk is still your best food buy . . .

Did you say "ouch!" too when the price of milk increased a couple weeks ago? . . . Maybe think dark thoughts in which the word "profligate" kept cropping up? . . . Well, it's a human reaction, no doubt . . . but we decided to enquire into the why and wherefores . . . and discovered that, far from raking in the profits, our favorite milk dispenser, Northwestern Creamery, operates on a profit so slim we blush to mention figures! . . . But would you believe they must sell three quarts of milk to realize a one-cent profit? . . . Just as for the rest of us, their costs keep increasing all along the line . . . higher wages, higher maintenance costs . . . not to mention increased taxes . . . At that Victoria dairies held the price line for a full two months after Vancouver dairies increased theirs! . . . Milk, believe us, is still your best food buy . . . contains all meat's high proteins at a fraction of the cost . . . And having Northwestern Creamery deliver their fresh, pure, home-town milk to your door daily . . . along with all the other good dairy products they're famous for . . . is the height of wisdom . . . Convenient, time-saving . . . yes . . . even money-saving when you think of it! . . . So get Northwestern Creamery milk for the best in nourishment . . . and treat your family to plenty of Northwestern's prize-winning Velvet ice cream too . . . Pioneer Marks 90 Years

This coming Tuesday will be an all important day for one of Victoria's well-known pioneers. It will mark the 90th birthday of Mrs. William Moore.

However, birthday celebrations will begin a day earlier for Mrs. Moore. She will be honored at a family dinner party on Monday at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Moore, 2000 Fernside Road.

Also present at the dinner party will be another son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. William Harold Moore of Uplands Road, and grandson and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Moore. Mrs. Moore's two grand-daughters and their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. B. Hutchinson and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hedley, all of Victoria, will be on hand for the celebration.

There are seven great-grandsons and five great-granddaughters.

A grandson, Mr. William J. Moore who lives in Ottawa, will be unable to attend the party. Mrs. Moore, whose husband was president and general manager of the Moore-Whittington Lumber Company Limited at the time of his death in September, 1950, was born in Orona, Mrs. William Moore will be 90 years old on Tuesday.

Ont., on April 4, 1877 and has lived in Victoria since 1888. She is now living at Richmond Heights Nursing Home.

Her husband and the late Mr. E. W. Whittington founded their company in 1892.

Mrs. Moore and her husband were both active in church activities and Mr. Moore and Mr. Whittington played a leading role in the building of Belmont Avenue Methodist Church. Mr.

Moore was Sunday School superintendent for many years. In later years the Moores attended Metropolitan United Church and Mrs. Moore still manages to attend several times during the year.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am a young man who has been married less than three years. I guess I am a rotten husband, at least this is what my wife keeps telling me.

I have never received one word of encouragement from my wife about my work or my efforts around the house. No matter what I do, she tells me her father can do it better and that next time she'll call him and get it done right.

I have had three coffee dates with a very attractive girl at work. She tells me I'm great and she makes me feel like a man. I know I could easily get into trouble with this girl if I continued to see her, so I'm going to cut it out. Please tell me what I can do to get a decent response out of my wife. I am—OPEN FOR SUGGESTIONS.

Dear Open: Your letter is unusual. Generally, this complaint comes from wives, not husbands. The yearning for approval knows no gender, however, and I am printing your letter to remind both husbands and wives that a few words of praise can bring magical results.

To you, sir, I pose this question: When did you last give your wife a verbal bouquet? As a rule those who give—get.

Dear Ann Landers: I came upon this ad in the Saturday Review today. It was paid for

Talk Given On Weaving

Mrs. Lyle Robinson of Seattle gave an illustrated talk on the various schools of weaving in Sweden, Norway and Finland, at the recent meeting of Victoria Hand Weavers' Guild. She showed slides and samples of weaving from the different countries. Mrs. Robinson is arranging another tour to May, Mrs. H. E. Hodgson will give a talk on the new library book Hints for Weavers, on April 7 in the "room".

Members are advised that date of birthday tea to be held on Saturday Island has been changed to May 13.

A good assortment of weaving is expected from the members for the coming weaving exhibition in June.

Oil Painting Costume Look

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP)—If days sewing the lace tablecloths costume designer Desmond Heely is successful, the characters in this year's Stratford Shakespearean Festival production Richard III will look as if they just stepped out of an oil painting.

To achieve the heavy, oil-painting effect he is using velvet and silk, washing them to make them limp, then crushing them against cotton that has been coated with cement.

When dry, the creased and wrinkled fabrics are hand-painted and then cut and sewn into designs created by Mr. Heely.

"I am striving for a stylized approach to the Richard period," says the bearded designer. "One cannot go on continually in the same trend of period costume."

For Queen Elizabeth's costume, Mr. Heely took 45 lace tablecloths, had them torn apart, dyed, sewn on to a gold background and painted.

"The queen's lace dress is taking weeks to complete. We had women on their knees for

Kitte Turmell Letters

Don't Turn Lights Out

Dear Kitte Turmell: My problem is probably the same as other people's but I have not as yet seen it printed. I was asked out for a date the other night and we were to go to a friend's house for a party. We went all right but when we got there after a while the lights were turned out. While the couples were making my date and I just sat there and waited for the lights to go back on because we didn't know each other well. "My question is: Was this the right thing to do or if not what should I have done? — 'Let it be Dark.'" Dear "Let it be Dark": Lights-out to encourage necking is not in good taste at any party. Next time tell your hostess to turn on the lights. Where were her parents, who should be in the background —

Teen Mags Grow

By MARY LEE BURROWS

Teen fan magazines are gaining in importance, and artists are relying on them more and more as a means of reaching and gaining fans.

One indication of their popularity is the fact that 16 Magazines has a circulation of more than 1,000,000.

But some groups, especially new ones, are having increasing difficulty in getting coverage as the mags insist on covering and reporting the same well-worn news of established outfits.

The best place to learn of new talent, therefore, is in small local publications.

Beware of mags put out by record companies. They're usually fairly good but are inclined to mention only their own talent.

Here and there: Record manufacturers say a price hike for LPs is inevitable... the Stones have received a gold record for Ruby Tuesday... and up 'til comes in with God on Our Side by Paul Jones.

Schools Will Consider Nature Conservation

B.C. school children are to be told that man cannot challenge or change natural laws with impunity, during National Wildlife Week April 9 to 15.

Theme of the week-long centennial year observance will be Conservation in Canada's Second Century.

The fish and wildlife branch and the department of education are co-operating in sending out 7,000 posters and copies of articles dealing with conservation to schools in the province.

"It was easy to believe in the myth of inexhaustible abundance in the early years of nationhood," says the article being prepared for the children.

"There appears to have been little understanding that men may co-operate with nature to encourage even more bountiful production, but the natural laws cannot be changed or challenged."

NEWARK, Ohio (UPI)—Two of four convicts who terrorized 14 members of a West Virginia family were captured without a struggle near here late Saturday.

The other two, both armed and considered dangerous, were pursued into nearby hilly woods by police.

The convicts escaped from a West Virginia state hospital Friday and holed up for 12 hours at a home in Cranestown, W.Va.

They fled there, taking William Wilson, 25, as a hostage. He was released unharmed near Williamstown, W.Va., at 6 a.m.

He had been forced to lie in the back seat of his car all night while the four travelled more than 300 miles from his Cranestown home.

William Barker, 24, serving life for raping a 17-year-old girl, and Johnny Gardner, 24, serving one to 15 years for armed robbery, were arrested while sitting in a stolen car near a rural church. They offered no resistance, authorities said.

Still at large were Malcolm Bragg, 35, once under death sentence for shooting a taxi driver to death over a $7 fare, and George Hooty, 34, sentenced to 20 years for armed robbery.
Bragg's sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Intellectuals Out

Choice: Scholar or Student Leader

A choice must be made, told high school students Friday between being a scholar and student leader. It is unfashionable to be an second class marks, a University of Victoria history professor Jackman warned leading high school students attending a humanities and science symposium at the university.

He told more than 30 Grade 11 and 12 students that this was an unfortunate fact of life.

If it was fashionable to be an intellectual, then many students on the borderline would find it easier to achieve the goal.

"If you decide, quite early along the way, that you are quite content to get a second class, you can do a great many things in university that are pleasant, amusing, character-building and fun."

"But," said Dr. Jackman, "there is a day of reckoning. It will come some time in the fourth year, and unlike deathbed confessions, repentance at that time is not efficacious."

FLAME, BANG
Among his audience were 28 high school students who were presenting papers on their work in the humanities or science to the symposium.

Student capabilities were illustrated with a flash and a bang, when Vancouver students Mike Dimich and Dave Hart, both 17, detonated their homemade volcano in front of the Education-Arts building.

SCALE MODEL
The scale model of a 10,000-foot volcano, capable of spewing volcanic ash over a 140-mile area was detonated to complete their morning paper on volcanoes.

"Peace is attainable," was the subject of a presentation by Kirk Tougas, of University Hill secondary school, Vancouver. He had studied both French and English writings on the subject before making his presentation.

DISCUSSIONS
Other presentations, Friday ranged from a theory on the structure of the number system to "Alice in Wonderland — the existential triumph."

The masterful presentations were followed by discussions, in which the youngsters were put on the spot to answer questions on, and if necessary defend, their theses.

NEW SLANT
The opening address at the symposium was given by Dr. J. Tazo Wilson, professor of geophysics and director of the Institute of Earth Sciences at the University of Toronto.

He gave a new slant on the age-old theory of the shifting of continents that gave rise to the Atlantic Ocean.

SEA FLOOR SLIDING
Evidence is being gathered, he said, to support the theory — not from the Atlantic seaboard, but from the Pacific.

He said the sea floor at the continental shelf off the American Pacific coast is sliding beneath the continent.

CONTINUAL GRIND
Measurements are available showing that the drift of the continents is continuing at the Pacific.

The earthquake region along the coastline is caused by the continual grind of the sea floor beneath the continent.

Professor Wilson said there are many earthquakes caused by this drift, beneath the sea, unfelt on the land.

TOURS OF CITY
On Saturday afternoon the students concluded presentation of papers and split up for tours of Greater Victoria.

They visited the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, the Greater Victoria Art Gallery, the Maritime Museum, Legislative buildings and University of Victoria science departments.

Chamberlin Honored

The B.C. Society for Crippled Children has awarded a life membership to recently-retired bank manager E. E. Chamberlin, 513 Transit — only the third person to receive such an award.

He is a past president of the group and also an official of the Lions, Chamber of Commerce, Multiple Sclerosis Society, John Howard Society and winter works program. The award is for outstanding aid to the handicapped of B.C.

Is Love Affair Over?

Safety Shaking Car Industry

By SALLY RYAN

DETROIT (AP) — Is doubt chilling the American motorist's love affair with his automobile?

Since last September, more than 1,000,000 cars, trucks and buses have been recalled to dealers' garages across the United States to check for potentially dangerous defects. That is more than one in every five new cars.

Since Jan. 1, U.S. automobile sales have been 21.2 per cent lower than a year ago, and Detroit is on the defensive.

SAD WINTER
Officially, automakers blame bad winter weather, the war in Viet Nam and tight money. Privately they say the national debate on auto safety and publicity given recent callbacks of defective vehicles also have hurt.

General Motors recalled 260,000 cars to replace their collapsible steering columns after eight of them cracked under stress. It will cost GM more

Litigation Delay Says Nader

DETROIT (AP) — Auto industry critic Ralph Nader said Saturday the chances of enforcing new safety standards in 1968 cars are diminishing because of delays involved in court action.

The industry went to court Friday to challenge three of the safety standards ordered by the U.S. government for 1968 cars.

Nader, whose efforts led to the establishment of government safety standards, predicted the body set up to enforce them, the national traffic safety agency, will back down.

His new frankness was inspired by a law that went into effect in the U.S. Sept. 9, obliging manufacturers to notify the newly established National Traffic Safety Agency of defects.

MORE AWARE
"People are more aware now," Harry E. Chesebrough, Chrysler vice-president, says. "We had a recall campaign before Nader came along, and it was pretty serious. But people wrote back and said, 'don't bother me—my car is O.K.'"

Nader is Ralph Nader, the Harvard lawyer whose best-seller, Unsafe at Any Speed, aroused public concern over automobile safety.

Nader says states should suspend the licence of a motorist who, notified of a potentially dangerous defect, doesn't have it inspected and repaired.

ROAD SIMULATORS
The automobile industry is throwing everything from computers and road simulators to black light and x-rays into the search for defects, and understandably so. The defects cost millions of dollars to repair and may hasten a switch to a competitor.

Quality control measures go back to the steel plant and other suppliers.

There are 14,000 or 15,000 parts in a car. GM has 181 models today—10 years ago it had 84. It offers 980 odd trim combinations. An assembly plant probably averages 50 to 60 cars an hour, and there may not be any two alike.

LABOR LEADERS
Labor leaders complain that production speed and the assembly line leads to defects.

At a union hall in Detroit, a Chrysler trimmer complained: "We just build them too fast. You could do a lot better job if you had more time."

"For 20 years I put the headlining in cars. We did two cars an hour. Now we do six."

"You are supposed to notify them if you can't finish in time or if something is wrong, but sometimes you don't. We see how they're built, and we know so much is going to get through."

Canadian Champion Stars in Ice Revue

Victoria Figure Skating Club will stage a spring revue in Memorial Arena from 6 to 8 p.m. today. The show is free and open to the public.

Headlining the revue will be Heather Fraser, junior champion of Canada; Paul Fisher, third-place winner in the Canadian novice championships, and Lorraine Hynes and Richard Madden, second-place finishers in senior dance events in Quebec.

For Greater Victoria

Brochures Designed To Attract Industry

The drive is on to bring more industry to Greater Victoria. The Greater Victoria Industrial Commission, which is associated with the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, is going to issue illustrated brochures designed to lure industry here.

East Deltawater, chamber manager and industrial commissioner, will consult with the real estate board and municipal planning departments to draw up a list of possible industrial property in the area.

Brochures will be sent to business and industry in the Pacific Northwest.

"I don't think Toronto or Chicago are much interested in Vancouver Island," said Oak Bay Coun. Fred Hawes.

"Nor do I," agreed William Armstrong. "I think we should go after the West Coast cities."

Brochures will cost $300 of the commission's $3,000 budget.

Greek Ship Goes Down

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP)—The 2,873-ton Greek-owned freighter Christina has sunk in the southern Aegean after taking water in its engine room, the merchant marine ministry announced. The 21-member crew abandoned the ship and was rescued by Greek warships.

SEA FLOOR SLIDING
Evidence is being gathered, he said, to support the theory — not from the Atlantic seaboard, but from the Pacific.

He said the sea floor at the continental shelf off the American Pacific coast is sliding beneath the continent.

CONTINUAL GRIND
Measurements are available showing that the drift of the continents is continuing at the Pacific.

The earthquake region along the coastline is caused by the continual grind of the sea floor beneath the continent.

Professor Wilson said there are many earthquakes caused by this drift, beneath the sea, unfelt on the land.

TOURS OF CITY
On Saturday afternoon the students concluded presentation of papers and split up for tours of Greater Victoria.

They visited the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, the Greater Victoria Art Gallery, the Maritime Museum, Legislative buildings and University of Victoria science departments.

Garden Notes

For the Birds

By M.V. CHESNUT

TREES FOR THE BIRDS (A.J.S. Colwood) — While the mulberry and the hawthorn are often recommended as trees which will attract birds to the garden, I have found that the ripe fruit dropping to the ground makes a rather unpleasant squishy mess of the lawn. I think your best bet is to plant one of the ornamental crabapples, for with most of these the small fruits hang on the tree well into the winter, and are most attractive to birds.

There is a very wide choice nowadays in ornamental crabs, especially since the Almey Rosebloom crab was chosen as Canada's Centennial tree. Some other good ones are Rudolph, Sundog, Arctic Dawn, Snowcap and Royal; Royal has reddish purple foliage.

GOLD DUST PLANT (K.L. Langford) — It is difficult to identify a plant from a single leaf, without knowing whether it is a tree, shrub, vine, herbaceous plant or houseplant, but from the appearance of the leaf you sent me, my guess is that it is Aucuba japonica, sometimes known as the Japanese Spotted Laurel or Gold Dust plant. While this shrub looks like a Laurel on which cream-colored paint has been splattered, it is actually a member of the Dogwood family. It likes partial shade and lots of moisture, and is easy to propagate from cuttings.

MARIPOSA LILY (W.S. Victoria) — This plant is a native of California and is grown from bulbs; its true name is Calochortus and it is sometimes nicknamed Butterfly Tulip or Globe Tulip although it is actually a member of the lily family and has no relationship with the tulip.

While I don't have his catalogue before me at the moment, I am reasonably sure the bulbs would be available from Rex D. Pearce, Moorestown, New Jersey, as this firm specializes in hard-to-get items; they are not stocked by regular bulb dealers. I doubt very much, though, whether the Mariposa Lily would be successful here as the plant has a violent dislike for sloppy wet winters.

EMERALD VELVET (N.J., Oak Bay) — The Emerald Velvet lawn grass, so widely advertised in the English garden magazines, is a creeping bent grass and is sold as sprigs or root offsets which are planted six inches apart all over the lawn; seeds are not available.

I imagine this grass would do as well here as in England, but I'd be inclined to take some of the advertising claims with a grain of salt. While I have never grown this particular variety, my experience with other kinds of sprigged grasses has not been particularly happy.

I don't know of any Canadian nursery selling the sprigs of Emerald Velvet.

SPANISH BROOM (R.S. Sidney) — This shrub may be propagated from cuttings taken during the first week of August. Make your slips about seven inches long, moisten the cut end and dip it in a hormone rooting powder, and insert in a coldframe or in an outdoor bed of rather sandy soil. Cover each slip with an up-ended jam jar until rooted and growing.

If you can get your hands on some fresh but fully ripened seeds, these will germinate fairly readily if sown in poorish, gritty soil in a coldframe, watering sparingly.

SYDNEY HARRIS

Airs His Thoughts

How can we call someone "successful" when he has failed to realize his personal life, his social life, his spiritual life, his aesthetic life when he has, indeed, sacrificed all these sustaining elements for the sole purpose of succeeding in his acquisitive, or public, life?

A little adversity may build character, but a little more can easily corrode it; as Cardinal Newman once said "There is nothing necessarily ennobling about suffering — suffering merely makes bad men worse."

It is a delusion that those engaged couples who know each other for a long time increase their chances for a happy marriage; for no matter whom you marry on Saturday, you wake up on Sunday married to somebody else.

The sense of mortality can be defeated only by engaging in some activity that projects far beyond one's own time and place; and it is ironic that those who have the greatest aversion to death are precisely those who have least known what to do with their lives.

Those who think that modern bureaucracy is a new and special problem of our time should be told that the

Talmud, composed thousands of years ago, contains this revealing sentence: "If the seas were ink, the reeds pens, the skies parchment, and all men scribes, they would not suffice to describe the complexity of government."

One of the chief differences I have observed between Englishmen and Americans is that if the Englishman genuinely believes he is good at something, he doesn't care if anyone else recognizes it or not, while the American seems not to believe he is good until he has got other people to tell him so. "He preached a good sermon today," generally means "one that applies more to the people around me than to me."

It is a non sequitur to think that because a teacher is "good with little children" he would therefore be good with her own, if she had any; for it is easy to be "good" with children who are ultimately someone else's responsibility.

The main reason that social progress is so slow and painful is that we are (quite properly) committed to majority rule as the safest form of government, and yet history discloses that it is the minorities of each age who most often turn out to have been right.

One Upstaging Enough

WASHINGTON — The administration is still mad at the press coverage given to President Johnson's much publicized trip to Guam, and well they might be.

A great deal of the news coming out of the conference had to do with South Vietnam Premier Ky's statements, rather than with what President Johnson had to say, and since Premier Ky hadn't even been invited until the last minute, it was only natural that the Johnson people would be upset.

The rumor is that President Johnson has no intention of allowing Premier Ky to upstage him again. We can just imagine what will happen the next time the President decides to go anywhere. "Mr. President, it's Marshall Ky on the phone." "Doggoneit, he's probably found out about my trip to Punta del Est in Uruguay next month."

"Hello, Marshall, how are you? ... Yes, Ah got home fine ... Yes, it was a wonderful trip ... It was good seeing you at Guam ... Ah was glad you could make it."

"No, Ah didn't mind you talking to the press at all ... Yes, they ran your picture in all the papers ... Ah'll send you the clips."

"What can I do for you, Marshall? ... You heard about my trip to Punta del Est and you were wondering if you could come along? ... Well, Ah don't know, Marshall ... my meeting down there isn't going to have much to do with Vietnam ... What's that you say? It doesn't matter?"

"You'd like to come anyway? ... Oh, Marshall, Ah sure would like to have you come, because you add so much to a conference, but Ah'm meeting with the leaders of all the South American countries and they might not understand you showing up there ... You won't say anything? You'll just observe? ... That's what you said before you came to Guam."

"Ah was just telling Dean Rusk yesterday, 'Ah wonder when we'll see but little friend and partner again?' But Ah feel, as he does, that we should hold off on another meeting for a while, just so that everyone can digest this one."

"You say you still want to come to Punta del Est ... You'd like to raise the question again about our bombing Hanoi? ... Ah really don't think that's the place to raise it, Marshall ... You see, we have problems in South American that have nothing to do with Vietnam."

"Now, General, don't feel that way ... Ah assure you that you won't lose face with your people if you're not invited to Punta del Est ... No, Gen. Westmoreland and the Ambassador aren't going either ... It's just going to be me, Dean Rusk and Sol Linowitz."

"We have no intention of selling you out in Uruguay. Believe me, Ah wouldn't lie to you ... What's that? You want to know if the Viet Cong have been invited? Of course not. And Ho Chi Minh hasn't been asked either."

"Naturally we consider you a full partner and ally, but that's got nothing to do with your being invited" to an Alliance for Progress conference in South America.

"Ah understand that, Marshall. We're aware that you're just a little counsily and we're a big country, but you shouldn't feel that we're going to sell you out just because you are not invited to every conference the United States attends."

"What's that? Ah didn't tell you about the Punta del Est conference at Guam because it hadn't occurred to me you'd be interested in it ... How can you say Ah was holding out on you? ... Ah tell you what. As soon as Ah get back from Uruguay Ah'll call you and let you know what happened ... Fine, fine. The same to you, Marshall. And give my best to your pacification program."

The President hangs up. "Where, Ah was clear. Oh, Marshall, tell the CIA. If Premier Ky starts making any inquiries about flights to South America, Ah want to be the first to know about it."

Remember When?

By HAL BOYLE

You probably have the flavor of many dear memories in your heart if you can look back and remember when— Houses were built so that everybody kissed each other good night on the ground floor and then they went to bed upstairs.

No one could pretend they were older or younger than they were because their birth date was written down in the family Bible, the big book with the dust on it. A child wondered if a seed was put in the ground upside down whether it would grow up or not. Could it possibly grow clear through the earth and come out in China?

You could always be a local intellectual if you spread the rumor around that you were taking a correspondence course in any subject. If you got a lot of mail, even the mailman had a higher opinion of you.

In every block there was a mentally unbalanced person, by birth or later circumstance, but everybody else in the block knew he was, and that was part of life, and it was better to keep him at home where he was known than to send him away to where he wasn't known. He belonged to the neighborhood.

The greatest family fun was to sit thoughtfully before the fireplace and hear mother play the piano while sister sang a lovely old song, such as Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming. Those were the days. Remember?

Panoramic view from oil rig shows seaplane on way to smooth landing

Oil Rig Workmen Share Gulls' View

Story and picture
By JIM RYAN

Up where the seagulls soar, Victoria stretches out in a panorama as far as the eye can see.

But the view is no longer for the birds alone.

Safety-helmeted workmen atop the huge, 9,300-ton floating oil rig are building at VMD's Dallas Road yard now share this sky-high vantage point of the ever-expanding capital. Nearly 200 feet below, Victoria looks like a city in miniature.

In the dark of night, said one workman, Victoria looks like a twinkling fairytale laid out on a carpet of light.

When completed, within the next month or so, the derrick of the $10,500,000 rig will tower 380 feet above the water.

An elevator whisks the visitor up to the cluttered steel decks of the rig in seconds.

Amid the tangle of pipes, cable and electrical wiring, the view is a sensational one. The multi-colored roofs of houses in James Bay stand out like technicolor figures on a green chessboard.

High-rise apartments — pillars of white dotted by squares of glass that catch the setting sun and reflect it back in bursts of wild orange color — and Dallas Road like towering marble tombstones in a memorial to the living.

Alongside the Ogden Point grain elevators, a lone British freighter — the London Prestige — lay at berth like a toy in a huge bathtub.

A tiny yellow dot in the sky heads toward the rig. A seaplane on its way to a smooth landing in the Inner Harbor. It drifts past the rig with no more sound than the flutter of a gull's wings.

The day shift changes and hundreds of workmen scurry home below like an army of ants.

A gust of wind whips through the top deck of the rig and ripples the harbor water.

Behind the Sooke hills, the sun sets in a splash of purple. Dusk descends.

The rig stands like a silent sentinel to progress.

And the city below prepares to bed down for another night.

Parents of 11 Die In Highway Crash

Three people, including the parents of 11 children ranging in age from one to 20 years, were killed in the collision of a car and a semi-truck truck 25 miles east of Saskatoon.

Killed were John Lortoff, 45, and his wife Margaret, 38, of Rycroft, Alta., and Mrs. Lortoff's brother James Seretaki, 36, of Saskatoon. Mrs. Elsie Seretaki was seriously injured.

Truck driver John Peir of Saskatoon was not badly hurt.

Authorities in Regina are concerned with the possibility of severe floods because of heavy snow cover.

A similar situation existed in 1956 when spring brought damaging floods to large areas.

A new oil field in an area where there has been no previous commercial production has been announced in Regina by Mineral Resources Minister A. C. Cameron. The well, containing light gravity oil, is 18 miles east of Estevan, about 115 miles southwest of Saskatoon.

A six-year-old Calgary boy, Bradley Kellogg, fell into a deep sewer excavation, half filled with water, and when rescuers rushed to the scene there was no sign of him.

Harold Myers, 47, and Frank Ostrow, 28, lowered a ladder and waded chest-deep in the muddy water, finally locating Bradley who was revived by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Psychiatric Nurses Warned by Union

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Psychiatric nurses at Tranquille school for retarded children were warned Friday that, if they start strike action to back wage and working condition improvement demands, they would be sequestered.

The warning came from Lloyd Whelan, organizer for the Western Conference of Teamsters, who said he had no compunction about strike action to make their points as far as possible.

"But because of the humanitarian aspect of your profession, you cannot strike," he said.

Russian Dilemma

Exalted Heroes Hit Few Snags

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda says the Soviet Union often awards its exalted "hero" medals to the wrong persons and said in a front-page editorial it is time for a change in the way Soviet workers are honored.

The editorial appears to turn a page in Soviet history, ending the system of workers' incentives that the late Joseph Stalin started in the 1930s to encourage the fastest possible industrialization.

"We do not need records established under hothouse conditions," the Communist party organ says in a clear reference to the dubious production records of Stalin.

Pravda says that in the future "hero" medals should go not only for more production but also for workers' ideas that lead to "better, cheaper and economically more effective" production.

In short, the paper says, the awards should go for brains as well as brawn.

Listeners Forgot Date

Swiss Air Audience Hails 'Moon Landing'

ZURICH, Switzerland (UPI)—A radio program which recalled Orson Welles' 1938 broadcast about an "invasion from Mars" convinced thousands of Swiss listeners Saturday that U.S. spacemen had landed on the moon.

The Welles program, broadcast about a month after the Munich crisis accustomed listeners to radio coverage of menacing situations, caused widespread panic in the United States because of its realistic use of "news bulletins" to interrupt what appeared to be an ordinary entertainment program.

The Swiss broadcast—an April Fool joke—used the same technique, and thousands of listeners were taken in. Even U.S. authorities here were not sure the report was false.

STREAM TO HILLS

Hundreds of persons streamed into the hills to watch for the "return of the moonship." A railroad on Mt. Uetliberg, overlooking Zurich, had to put on extra trains to handle the load.

Telephone exchanges were jammed for hours by calls from people wishing to tell relatives and friends the news or calling newspaper offices, radio stations and other media for confirmation.

Belief in the story was increased because there are no weekend newspapers in Switzerland and television does not start broadcasting until 6 p.m.

U.S. CELEBRATION

The U.S. consulate-general in Zurich called the UPI bureau for confirmation of the landing. It was reported over all German-language Swiss radio stations in an elaborate hour-long broadcast.

At the winter resort of Klosters, throngs of vacationing Americans staged a huge celebration.

The mood sobered when the American network in Europe failed to give confirmation of the event.

The broadcast, directed by newscaster Hans Menz of Radio Zurich, began with a "flash" interrupting a popular satirical weekly program.

SLAMMING DOORS

It carried running reports from Swiss radio correspondents in various world capitals. There were interviews with experts and men in the street—all pre-recorded. The broadcast included pre-staged "technical faults" and "slips," the slamming of doors and the sound of newscasters running in with the latest bulletins.

The broadcast concluded with

CALGARY (CP)—Many Calgary families filled bathtubs and buckets Saturday after a radio station broadcast a warning that the city water supply would be shut off for several hours.

City engineering officials told the embarrassed station operators the "city employee" who gave them the news was an April Fool's prankster.

BEHIND THE WHEEL
with Peter Pollen

Want to get better gas mileage from your car? Here are a few quick tips: Start up slowly from a stop. Your new Ford will give you a jet take-off if you want but bursts of speed eat up the gas.

Second: Change your speed as rarely as possible. Hold speed constant. Racing between stop lights eats gas.

Third: Sit as far back in the driver's seat as possible for comfort. Arms should be almost straight out. Most drivers sit much too close to the wheel. Sitting back from the wheel gives you a lighter touch on the gas pedal. Your muscles are not cramped and you feel less fatigued on long trips.

Fourth: Have your car checked for proper tire pressure. Soft tires afford a softer ride but will eat up gas and rubber. Check for dragging brakes, fast idling, leaking gas lines (easy to spot on the garage floor), proper adjustment of automatic transmission (especially when the car is new) and finally change the oil regularly.

Safety tip: Don't buy heavily tinted glass in your next car. It can reduce your night vision as much as 80%.

Wave as you go by.

Manpower Limits Reached?

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Communist forces in Vietnam are suffering battle fatalities at a rate approaching double that of last year but their total strength, by official U.S. estimates, continues to grow.

Leaders of President Johnson's administration believe it is possible that Communist losses have reached a "cross-over" point—that is, a point at which they exceed the capacity to make replacements.

This would be an important and perhaps decisive turning point in the war.

CALL FOR HELP?

Washington officials agree that it could confront North Vietnam's leaders with a need for critical new decisions. They might turn toward peace negotiations, or they might move to expand the war by calling for help from Communist countries which have offered "volunteers."

The trend of American losses in Vietnam also has climbed. The U.S. command in Saigon reported Thursday that U.S. combat deaths last week were 274.

Plot Suspect Nabbed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Gordon Novel, wanted in New Orleans in connection with the probe of President John Kennedy's assassination, was arrested Saturday in suburban Gahanna.

Gahanna Mayor Paul Van Auker said Novel, 29, a former New Orleans night club operator, was seized in that small community, on a warrant issued by Louisiana authorities.

ROYAL POMP

But it took on the pomp and color of nuptials involving royal families.

The joy of a wedding counterbalanced the sorrow occasioned by the unsolved slaying in September of the bride's twin sister, Valerie, in the family home in suburban Kenilworth.

But the ghost of sudden death clouded the marriage day's happiness. Sharon's step-grandmother, Emily Guyer, 68, of Alhambra, Calif., died apparently of a heart attack in a hospital in suburban Evanston.

1,300 INVITATIONS

The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller III, had the honor of being the first to be escorted to her seat in the chapel. Mrs. Percy followed. Then the others were ushered to their places in the 51-pew chapel.

In all, 1,300 invitations had been sent out.

Sharon, 23, carried a simple garland bouquet of white violets, rhododendrons and roses. They are the state flowers of Illinois, West Virginia and New York.

The bridegroom—29 and 6 feet 6—is a member of the West Virginia legislature. He is a Democrat. Senator Percy and the two Rockefeller governors—Nelson of New York and Winthrop of Arkansas—are Republicans.

EMPIRE DRESS

The bride wore an Empire wedding dress of white lace encrusted on heavy silk crepe, with a high, round neckline and long, straight sleeves. It was designed by Mainbocher. A cloudlike veil of tulle hung from a simple lace tiara.

The church was decorated with tall, flowering crab trees, blooming magnolias, azaleas and multicolored flowers.

The exchange of vows was nonsectarian. Rockefeller is a Baptist and Sharon a Christian Scientist.

Van Auker said he contacted the New Orleans office of Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison, who is conducting the assassination probe, earlier Saturday "about our belief that Novel was here." He said a warrant was issued for Novel's arrest, relayed to Gahanna police through the Ohio Highway Patrol.

Soon after being lodged in jail, Novel issued a statement. Police distributed the original copy to newsmen. It read in part:

Boston-Area Hijacking

ARMORED TRUCK, MILLION GRABBED

205 Hurt In Train Collision

OSAKA (AP)—Five persons perished and 205 were injured Saturday when a crowded Japanese passenger train smashed into a stalled truck at an unattended grade crossing near here. Twenty-five of the injured were reported in serious condition.

Two coaches plunged 15 feet into the Onosato River, one landing upside down, the other upright. The river was shallow, however and neither went under water. A third car dangled from a bridge over the river.

About 500 police and railroad workers helped the passengers out of the coaches, and within three hours all the injured had been taken to hospitals.

The truck was owned by the Stately Detective Service of Fall River.

SEX IN 1968

In 1968, there were six such robberies in North Attleboro, Brockton, Concord, Bedford and the Jamaica Plain section of Boston. Bandits got $338,000.

In August, 1962, four men held up a mail truck in Plymouth, getting away with $1,550,000, the largest cash haul in the nation's history. No one was ever caught.

In 1950, the Brink's Co. counting house in Boston's North End was held up for $1,200,000.

Abducted Girl Found Unhurt

CHICAGO (AP)—Carrie Stephens, 8, returned home unharmed Saturday night, five days after she was abducted, and police said a one-armed man has been charged with aggravated kidnapping.

The girl was found in the apartment of Michael Zito, 50, police said, about a mile from her home. Zito was to appear in court today.

Police said Carrie identified Zito as the man who took her off the street Monday evening.

Commander William Murphy of the General Assignment Division said police found Carrie and Zito in the apartment after receiving a tip from a woman who lives nearby. They were alone in the apartment, he said.

Carrie was taken directly from the apartment to Sweden Covenant Hospital for a physical examination.

Detective George Ruckelsh said she was "shaken but not hysterical."

Results of the examination were not disclosed, but authorities reported Carrie was not harmed. She told police "the men did not harm me," and reported she had been alone with him since her abduction Monday.

The girl's mother said she had never seen Zito before.

Nice-Guy Mike? No—Ruthlessman!

VANCOUVER (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson played the role of a jovial tough guy as the star attraction Friday night at the Liberal party's fund raising A Night with the Prime Minister.

A blare of trumpets and torch bearers touched off the lively political entertainment in which Mr. Pearson waded ahead while it would be like to see Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker dance "the camp fire polka."

"I don't want to be accused of making a personal attack," Mr. Pearson said amid rounds of laughter from the estimated 500 guests at the dinner.

"Although I'm getting pretty tough these days."

"It appears you have to be 'tough, tough and cruel to be a good leader,' playing the role of the tough leader, he said: 'I'm more ambitious, I'm far more ruthless and I detect my friends—maybe on Monday morning I'll be a better prime minister."

The dinner was capped by dancers who demonstrated popular steps during the regimes of former Liberal prime ministers since confederation, such as the turkey trot in the days of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

It ended with go-go girls gyrating to the latest steps of what Liberals like to call their go-go party.

Experts Hit LSD Ban

Two mental health experts and an official of the Alcoholism Foundation agreed Saturday liquor is a more serious problem than LSD.

The treatment director of Sevenoaks and the psychiatrist who heads Central Vancouver Island Mental Health Centre at Nanaimo agreed laws banning LSD may usher in a new Prohibition era, where use of an impure product becomes widespread.

Dr. Sven Jensen said in Nanaimo "the effect of banning LSD altogether, is like the effect prohibition had on banning the use of alcohol in the Roaring Twenties."

James Blair of Sevenoaks, a treatment centre for emotionally disturbed children, said B.C.'s new anti-LSD law may turn the drug into a type of "moonshine."

Dr. Jensen said alcohol is a far more serious problem than LSD, especially among teenagers. And he said LSD is a valuable tool in treatment of alcoholism.

Reg. Clarkson, Vancouver Island director of the Alcoholism Foundation of British Columbia, agreed that the problem of alcoholism was of greater magnitude than LSD.

He said 90 per cent of the high school boys and 60 per cent of the girls drink liquor

but less than one per cent probably take LSD.

Mr. Blair, who stressed that he was discussing LSD only as a layman, also suggested the new legislation could make it difficult for medical men to obtain the drug for experimental uses.

"The government's action on LSD reminds me of the venereal disease posters they

Canadiens Dump Hawks, 5-4 As Leafs Take Rangers, 5-1

Montreal Canadiens bounced back after trailing Chicago Black Hawks, 3-1, early in the third period Saturday to solidify their hold on second place in the National Hockey League before 15,883 fans.

John Ferguson's 19 and 20th goals of the season provided

Canadiens with a 5-4 victory to boost Montreal two points ahead of third place Toronto Maple Leafs who dumped the visiting New York Rangers, 5-1.

The regular season ends today with all six teams seeking action. Montreal clinched at least a tie for second place with the win. Toronto could tie the Canadiens but could lose third place to the Rangers who are just one point back.

Montreal outshot the Hawks, 45-28, but were unable to beat a brilliant Denis DeJordy and Dave Balon's first period goal gave Canadiens the early lead.

DENNIS SCORES

Dennis Hull and Stan Mikita put Chicago ahead in the second period and Phil Esposito boosted the Hawks lead to two goals early in the final period.

Henri Richard sparked the Montreal comeback, flying around Pierre Pilote to score his 20th goal of the season. Yvon Cournoyer tied it up with Pat Stapleton just settling in to beat New York goalie Ed Giacomin.

Frank Mahovlich's 17th goal and Mike Walton's seventh goal in the second period boosted the score to 3-0 before Pappin scored his pair.

FIVE FOR FIVE

Vic Hadfield ended Bower's shutout bid late in the third period, scoring his fifth goal in five games since changing to the curved stick used by Bobby Hull, to end the scoring.

Montreal is in position to Detroit and Toronto in the battle for the teams' remaining games today.

Europe's Stars 'Americanized'

ST. LOUIS (AP)—In a concession to newspaper headline writers and radio broadcasters, the St. Louis Stars of the National Professional Soccer League are doing things with those Polish and Yugoslavian names which dominate the line-up.

Instead of Milona Kalicanin passing to Radivo Matko for a shot on goal, it will be plain of Mlo Kalican passing to Rast Matko. They're Polish members of the St. Louis soccer team.

In other alterations designed to Americanize the names of the stars, Norbert Pogorza of Poland becomes Norb Pogorza.

and Joachim Puls becomes Joe Puls.

Erich Hahn, Rudi Kolb and Hans Fuhrmann of Germany will keep their given names. In a town famous for its German beer, who could admit trouble with a name like Hans Fuhrmann.

Another change for program purposes will be in the case of Tibomir Markovic. From now on he's Tim Markovic.

While the name changes were announced in St. Louis, the stars and coach Rudi Gutendorf were in Phoenix, Ariz., tuning up for their first game.

B.C. Pro Soccer Appears Doomed

VANCOUVER (CP)—The future of organized professional soccer in Canada appeared in jeopardy following a stormy meeting Friday night between the Professional United Soccer Association and the Canadian Soccer Football Association, soccer's governing body in Canada.

USA officials said after the meeting there appears to be no way that Toronto and Vancouver, only Canadian cities in the league, can remain. The league needs the sanction of the CFSA to operate officially.

Ten U.S. cities in the league already have signed an agreement with the U.S. Soccer Association.

The USA, including Toronto and Vancouver, was to have started this year as a "mini-league" with teams from Britain representing the North American clubs. In future years, the USA would operate on its own as a full-fledged professional circuit.

Hibernian of the Scottish League was to represent Toronto this year and Sunderland of the English League Vancouver. Major areas of disagreement Friday night appeared to lie in the realm of future territorial rights. The CFSA refused to concede professional rights to the two clubs outside a 50-mile radius of Toronto and Vancouver.

He said the real problem was that the USA wanted virtual control of professional soccer in Canada for all time. He said the CFSA wanted to see the professional league established, but could not agree to this.

PLANS TIGHTEN

Lawyer Chuck Willis, representing the Vancouver USA team, said the CFSA proposals "are so tough that no lawyer in his right mind could look at them."

Said Steve Stavro, owner of the Toronto club: "There goes 19 years' work down the drain. How do you explain something like this to the kids who have been looking to the pro league as a shining hope for the future?"

At least 12 games will be necessary to decide the winner in the double-lockout competition. The provincial champions will carry on to the regional finals, scheduled to be played in Oregon.

Leafs Depart Winners But Was It for Good?

By JIM TANG

Victoria Maple Leafs ended their third Western Hockey League season last night at Memorial Arena but when they skated off the ice at about 10:30 the big question was still unanswered.

Was last night's game just the last of the season or was it also the last for the Victoria Maple Leafs?

General manager Buck Houle had the question put directly to him and could do no more than leave it still a matter for speculation.

"We," said Houle, referring to the Toronto Maple Leafs organization, "won't know the answer for a while. The Western Hockey League meeting is set for next month in San Diego and we will have to declare our intentions by then."

"I expect a decision will be made by the end of the month. All I can say now is that I have had no indication or intimation from Toronto that the Leafs may not be back in Victoria."

However, the sound reasoning at the moment is that last night's game marked the end of another hockey era in Victoria.

The Leafs, born in the 1964/65 season, when Stafford Smythe decided to move his WHL franchise from Denver, have been a financial flop although enjoying considerable better than average success on the ice.

They reached the playoff final in their first season, won the Patrick Cup last spring and this season failed to make the playoffs, clinching fifth place only Friday night.

However, each season has brought increased losses to the parent Toronto club. The deficit this season is expected to be the largest by far and it seems entirely unlikely that the parent club will carry on. In Victoria, that is.

WENT OUT WELL

If this is to be the case, the Leafs at least bowed out in fine fashion although not earning a chance to defend the trophy so thrillingly won last season.

Their 3-1 win last night over Portland Buckaroos was their third in a row, following back-to-back victories over the Vancouver Canucks, who are perhaps the big story of the season for their unexpected accomplishment of becoming one of the four playoff clubs.

Last night's game, meaningless as regards the standings, was to a large extent played for individual honours.

BUCKAROS DID THEIR LEVEL BEST

Buckaroos did their level best to try and win a second scoring championship for captain Art Jones. And the Leafs did what they would to help Andy Heberton, reportedly due for a bonus if he could produce his 25th goal.

Both Jones and Heberton failed to make it.

Out on the ice for about 30 minutes in the last two periods, Jones could only manage a dubious assist on Portland's goal. That left him with 88 points, two behind Seattle's Guy Fieker, but it took some good luck and some good goaling by Al Smith to hold him to the one point.

Heberton, who missed two big openings and was stopped at least twice by good goaling, got the Leafs' first goal and ended up with 24 for the season.

REWARD FOR FAITHFUL

Portland's preoccupation with Jones produced a reward for the 2,672 faithful in wide-open action.

With the Buckaroos intent mainly on offense, most of the game was spent inside the blue lines and it was a bit amazing that only three goals resulted from the almost-continuous bombardment.

Heberton's goal came on a close-in, sharply-angled shot which found a small opening on the short side.

Then Cliff Schnauz equalized with an alert play, poking the puck away from Claude La-house, who had knocked down a high flip by Jack Blonda near the Victoria blue line, and beating Smith from the right side.

Both goals came in the first period and it wasn't until Art Donaldson was serving the first of his two-third-period penalties that the often-hectic action produced a third goal.

It was shot by Milan Marcetta and it gave the Victoria centre his first 40-goal season in one league. He scored 43 goals last season but eight of them came while he was on loan to Tulsa Oilers of the Central League.

WHL Semis Away Next Week

SEATTLE (AP)—Playoffs to decide which two teams will meet for the Western Hockey League's Lester Patrick Cup championship start Wednesday in Portland and Seattle.

League officials announced Saturday Vancouver will meet the league-leading Portland Buckaroos and California will play Seattle's second-place Totems. Vancouver and California are third and fourth, respectively.

The winners of the two best-of-seven series will clash in a similar playoff for the WHL trophy at a date to be set later.

California and Seattle will play their second game here Friday while Portland goes to Vancouver. The third games will be at Seattle and California at Oakland and Vancouver in Portland April 9.

Portland returns to Vancouver for their fourth game April 10 and Seattle is at Oakland for their fourth April 12.

Other Portland-Vancouver games, if necessary will be at Portland April 13, at Vancouver April 14 and at Portland April 15.

Other Seattle-California games, if needed will be at Oakland April 14 and at Seattle April 15. A seventh game if necessary will be in Seattle at a date to be set.

City Boxers Miss Titles

VANCOUVER—Two Victoria fighters lost out in the finals of the Diamond Gloves Tournament in Vancouver on Saturday.

Ken Alexander of London Boxing Club was condemned by Marjan Rolat of Vancouver in the light heavyweight final and Bill Taylor was defeated in a hotly contested heavyweight title final.

The crowd was certain that Taylor had outboxed highly rated Wally Chaven of Seattle and voiced their disapproval of the decision.

Seattle Totems and Oakland Seals, semi-final opponents in the Western Hockey League playoffs, picked up overtime victories Saturday as the league nears the end of the regular season.

The second place Totems were sparked by the return of star left winger Bill Dineen in their 3-1 victory over Vancouver Canucks in Seattle while Seals dumped the host Los Angeles Blades by the same score.

Dineen, who had been out of action for a month when he dislocated his shoulder in an argument with a motorist following a game, picked up three assists and gave the Totems important strength for the playoffs.

blamed Seattle's Jim Patterson for starting the fistfights and fined him $100.

"There was no apparent reason for his starting the fight," leader said. "Con Madigan of Portland kept backing away from him."

Portland's Jack Blonda was slapped with a similar fine for leaving the bench to enter the melee.

In addition each team was fined $500 because ten additional players joined the brawl from each bench.

The 20 players who left each team bench will have to pay a total of $1,000. Each team was fined $500.

SEATTLE (AP)—Seattle and Portland Western Hockey League players were fined a total of $1,200 by league officials Saturday for taking part in a 20-minute brawl Friday night.

The fines came after one of the season's biggest and longest fights near the end of the game in which Portland beat Seattle 2-0.

Comox Valley Report

'Fluoridation Essential'

COURTENAY — Preventive dentistry is now one of the most important duties of the upper health unit.

Health officer G. A. Gibson reported on work carried out in this field by the health unit in the past year.

"The dental health problem will never be solved unless the prevalence and incidence of dental disease is decreased.

"This can be achieved only by more research and by more preventive measures. An obvious pre-requisite is the fluoridation of all public water supplies.

"Intensive educational programs, which inform individuals of the importance of oral hygiene, good diet, and regular dental care can simultaneously decrease dental need and increase dental demand.

"Unless such preventive services as these are developed and organized, Canada's dental resources and finances will be consumed in the attempt to restore dental health lost because preventive measures were not carried out."

Dr. H. G. Bennett was appointed regional dental consultant Aug. 15.

Competent authorities have stated 50 per cent of dental diseases can be prevented with the available knowledge. The application of the knowledge depends upon three main factors, research, education and dental care.

The report of the health unit explains the dental program with emphasis on primary prevention.

"The Dental Extension program, which introduces full qualified dentists on a traveling clinic basis to areas without resident practitioners, has filled a great need."

"Not only do the young children in these areas receive a good start towards better dental health, but also many older children and adults are given the chance to obtain needed dental services while the dentist is in their area."

"These programs are growing with the expansion of the upper island."

"In 1966, 721 children in 18 communities were restored to good dental health. It is interesting to note that although 100 per cent of the children received fluoride treatment, the time spent on each child has not increased accordingly."

Strathcona Problem Attacked

By HELEN MITCHELL

CAMPBELL RIVER — Native Sons and Daughters have endorsed strong resolutions condemning pollution of Buttle Lake and other water bodies.

At the B.C. convention held at the group responded to a significant speech on pollution by author and conservationist Rodrick Hais-Brown.

The group unanimously passed a resolution calling for action "to prevent the despoliation of Strathcona Park and other parks."

AIR, WATER, SOIL
The resolution hit at pollution of air, water or soil not only in parks and recreation areas, but in any area where the general health and welfare of the public may be endangered.

The Native Sons recommended a committee be set up with representation from each Port in B.C., to study pollution.

WELFARE PROBLEM
This group will make recommendations to the provincial government and other agencies responsible for protecting the health and welfare of the people.

Native Daughters voted to support Campbell River Water District in its protest to the B.C. government over Buttle Lake, and to back any protest about any further "exploitation or pollution in any provincial park."

Savage Honor

By PATRICK O'NEILL

DUNCAN — The ritual of the dance is a grim thunderhead of Indian tradition. Initiation into the company of dancers is not a tourist show.

It is run in secrecy, protected by the whisper of a threat.

There is a tough cult behind the mystery surrounding initiation of young Indians into the dance ritual.

Those who practice it consider other Indian dancers, like those who dance at the drop of a vice-regal hat, as fakers.

The real dance is sacred. It is not for the white man. And the initiation is not pretty. Often, Indian girls are "grabbed" for the initiation.

The white man's word would be abducted. In the secrecy of the native subculture, the word is "grabbed."

There is a rigid training period for the initiates, who are often in the ritual against their will.

It is a great honor to be chosen, but some candidates cannot take the training, they try to escape.

When caught by the cult, they are severely punished.

Several years ago, a married woman was "grabbed" in Saanich. Her husband, who lived off the reserve, broke the code, and filed a complaint with police.

Already this season a boy has tried to escape the initiation training. He was recaptured.

The threat of violence keeps the secrets of the dance, and its initiation.

Yellow Point Comedy Wins Drama Contest

NANAIMO — Yellow Point Drama Group's production of Hortense Couch Tol by George Courteline has won the Vancouver Island one-act drama festival.

The play's director, Margaret Davidson, won the Best Director award. Hortense Couch Tol will go to Vancouver to compete in the B.C. Finals.

Other awards at the festival Saturday night:

● Best Visual, Ladysmith Little Theatre, The Tragedy of Tanco by A. M. D. Fairbairn.

● Best Actor, Ken Bostock in the St. Matthias' Little Theatre's The Form by N. F. Simpson.

● Best Actress, Eunice Jepson in Yellow Point's Not Enough Rope, by Elaine May.

● Four people shared Best Supporting Actor, the four moving men in Hortense, and Best Supporting Actress was Joan Morgan for her portrayal of an old lady in Not Enough Rope.

John Anderson, John Robertson, John Thomson and Stan Dakin were the four moving men.

● Best Senior Actress was Alice Adamson as the old Indian woman in Tragedy.

● Special mentions were given to Mark Brann director of Overtones, Elizabeth Wilson for her performance as Penelope Trueheart.

Franklin Johnson's closing remarks were the key to his applications and remarks throughout the four-day competition.

"Suit the action to the word, and the word to the action," he quoted Hamlet.

GO, MAKE READY
He paraphrased the last line, indicating that the groups now forget their mistakes and "Go make you ready, for your next festival."

He said if someone were to challenge anyone to play a classic on a piano, there would be great explanations about lack of training.

However, no one seems to mind not having training, when taking part in a play.

ACTORS WORK
He insisted actors should study and attend as many classes as they can.

Just as a pianist practices,

"so does an actor develop the tools of his trade."

"He has to learn the aspects of acting, as well as rehearsing."

"Technique can be taught, in fact it must be taught."

He said that it was not until Stanislavski developed his rules for acting, that any thought had been given to the actor presenting anything from within.

These rules, he maintained, were still a very important basic training for actors. "If you believe in the laws, and obey them, you never get in trouble."

Stanislavski, he said was not as modest as Moses, who only brought down 10 laws. "He brought down 100," (Stanislavski) wrote.

Campbell River sports car driver Tim Hamilton escaped with bruises when his $10,000 car flipped at Westwood race track in Coquitlam.

Mr. Hamilton lost control on a curve at 80 mph. The popular 37-year-old Island man was part-owner of the powerful Shelby Mustang car.

A roll bar in the car probably saved his life, when the car crashed down on its roof.

He walked from the wreckage, and said the car would be operating soon. The accident occurred during practice runs for today's eight-race season opener.

VICTORIA, B.C., SUNDAY, APRIL 2, 1967

On a clear morning from the porch of our house in Kakamega, Kenya, one can see a distant purple mass against the western sky. This vast volcanic hump is Mount Elgon, over 14,000 feet of ancient craters and frozen lava. On its rain-drenched lower slopes grows a thick venom-green jungle, full of tall bamboo, twisted vines and nasty wild animals. Higher up its sides where it is much cooler lies a vast expanse of empty moorland. This is a lonely region of stark, black cliffs and bleak, wind-swept ridges sparsely covered with wiry heather. The contrast between these two zones is quite startling - if the bottom of the mountain belongs to Tarzan, the top is strictly for Heathcliffe!

Sweeping Panorama of Kenya Was Climbers' Reward

By DR. A. R. HUTCHINSON

Shortly after arriving here from Victoria last September I scrambled up the eastern peak of this fascinating mountain, and thereby effectively crippled myself for days by outraging numerous long-dormant muscles. But the tang of the thin, cool air, the sweeping panorama of half of Kenya, and the Olympian satisfaction of being on top of the visible world remained sharp in my memory long after the aches and pains had been forgotten.

Last month my campaign to Stamp Out Disease yielded little but sore feet and discouragement. Disease flourished as mightily as before, or so it seemed. So when a few of our friends (a motley collection of teachers, bank managers, volunteers and part-time poachers) organised an expedition to climb the western peak of Mount Elgon I eagerly joined them, thinking to refresh my weary spirit in this unpopulated wilderness.

The first disillusionment of the weekend came when my wife and I reached the rendezvous point and discovered that the wilderness was to be populated by no fewer than 16 of the species from which I had hoped to escape—two Britons, one Kenyan, three Canadians and 10 Germans.

This embryo UN and its considerable baggage was to be transported up the mountain to the base camp by two borrowed Land Rovers. At first glance these vehicles looked very rugged and businesslike, as Land Rovers do. However, when I looked at our particular model more closely I found that it had been built shortly after the Second World War and had it resided in British Columbia was old enough to have voted in the last provincial election. The roof consisted of a piece of torn canvas, the doors wouldn't shut properly, and as I watched it became inconvenient of motor oil onto the grass.

After squeezing tightly and sweetly into this superb machine

when the larger and more grumpy African mammals woke up and began to look for something to eat, dismember or stomp on, prudence dictated that we stay at the forest station overnight. But as our expedition was endowed with rather more enthusiasm than caution, we plunged straight on into the jungle, leaving the forest ranger behind us shouting pessimistic predictions into the deepening gloom.

There is little twilight in the tropics so it was soon pitch dark. The track quickly became steep and very narrow. Creepers and bamboo thickets closed in from both sides, slashing at the sides of the Land Rover as they crept along in four-wheel drive. Our vintage model, being driven rapidly through the bush. At the same time a large, elephant-colored mass appeared on the track ahead, then veered off to the left with much crackling and splintering of bamboo. Amidst all the crashing and commotion came a noise such as an angry pig might make, if an angry pig had access to a 200-watt amplifier and matching stereo speakers.

We had blundered into a large herd of Elgon's elephants, which are known for their great size, good health and bad tempers. My belly suddenly seemed to be full of ice cubes and my knees turned to under-strength jelly. If these elephants felt like splattering us all over the jungle they would, and if they didn't they wouldn't, but it was entirely their option. We feeble humans were completely at the mercy of these large, intelligent creatures of another species. It was an unfamiliar and frightening experience, one much beloved by writers of fiction.

However, they turned out to be good elephants, and they merely retreated deeper into the jungle, grunting and snorting curses at us as they bashed their way through the thick vegetation. At about this time our driver managed to communicate something of his terror to the moribund Land Rover, for it suddenly came to life and sprang up the hill with a frantic roar, dumping me flat on the hood again in the process.

Despite the miraculous recovery of our transport, the expedition went on to degenerate relentlessly into a sort of creeping nightmare. The narrow rutted trail stretched on endlessly, and despite advice from several astonished and very sleepy Maasai gentlemen who we woke up along the way, we passed the easy Mountain Club hut in the dark and ended up, at 1 a.m. high on the frigid moorlands.

we set off down the dust road to the mountain at maximum speed—23½ m.p.h. We had gone only a few yards when there was a sudden spine-crumbling jolt, a hideous metallic crash, and all was lost to view in a vast cloud of red dust. I was sure we had gone over a landmine, but soon learned that this was the normal manner in which this aged and overburdened vehicle negotiated slight irregularities in the road surface.

As one of our German companions remarked, "Im gut vor mine hemorrhoiden, ya?"

Brained and dust-choked we arrived at the forest station where the road enters the jungle just at dusk. As this is the time of day

The headlights slowly grew dimmer. Finally it gave out a convulsive and clearly recognizable death-rattle and expired completely.

I had been reclining on the hood-mounted spare wheel as a sort of lookout, but when the engine began to make alarming noises I stood up on the front bumper to avoid being put into orbit by an errant piston. Now in the sudden comparative silence I became aware of a rather terrifying noise ahead, as if 50 steam-powered bulldozers were

Hardships and Lack of Funds Have Been the Threads That Weave the Island Library Fabric

A new book, The Key, may never appear on the best-seller list, and will almost surely lie forgotten at the bottom of a pile of papers in the homes of people who are presently reading it.

Between the lines of this book, however, there lies a story of people with a dogged determination, with humor, and the same vitality that helped to build Canada.

The book was published in the centennial year, but traces a history of people and events dating back to 1862.

It is the story of libraries, and the struggle to develop them, as recounted by records and recollections of libraries and librarians served by the Vancouver Island Regional Library.

The earliest accounts are from Nanaimo which had a library under the auspices of St. Paul's Anglican Church in 1862, calling itself the Nanaimo Literary Institute.

Later, with the help of a coal company, the first reading room and lecture hall was built, and the books were transferred there.

However, the city council of the time decided that the building was too good to be used in such a way, and somehow managed to take it away from the institute, and used it for a city hall.

Needless to say, with this sort of public spirited support, the library died.

A phoenix reaction set in, and from the ashes of the reading club sprang a group of 33 people who formed an association, and were responsible for being one of the first communities to utilize the Public Libraries Act in 1913.

The Nanaimo Municipal Library was born.

Here, and in other areas, the depression hit the pocketbooks and paychecks of all who were fortunate enough to have steady work.

Determined that the library should not die, librarians accepted further wage reductions, so that the money saved in wages could be used to help keep the libraries alive.

Such a person was the Nanaimo librarian who accepted a cut that resulted in an income of $48 a month.

The city was renowned throughout B.C. as having the worst library building in the province, until only a few years ago.

In 1936, Dr. Helen Gordon Stewart came from New York representing the Carnegie Foundation, and began the Vancouver Island Union Library.

This had been made possible through efforts of mainland people who were responsible for the Fraser Valley Library Demonstration, which had managed enough public support to gain the Foundation's grant by meeting its qualifications for public library support.

The spread of the Carnegie Foundation Grants included the Island, only because of the 33 Nanaimo people who had been responsible for having created a large enough nucleus on which to develop the Union Library.

With the direction of Dr. Stewart, they interested surrounding school boards, Women's Institutes and book clubs in joining the library revolution.

The first office quarters was in the Wallace Street Dairy, and the headquarters was in the basement of a building at Wallace and Fitzwilliam, and for sometime, shared space with the Health Centre.

The place was so cold and wet that the staff wore rubber boots and the children's section was moved to the furnace area.

The furnace was stoked by the janitor in the morning, and from then on, it was up to the staff to drive away the cold.

Once the library remained closed because a severe winter made it impossible for the furnace to keep up any level of heat.

ONE OF FIRST BOOKMOBILES.

However, the place had a certain air about it that oldtimers cannot quite forget.

It was the smell of books, repairing glue, and a rat that had died in some secluded spot.

The bookmobiles, too mobile to acquire a rat of their own, nevertheless had their own sweet histories.

Until recent times they were second hand, but were adopted with love and affection, and were given names; Reo (for the engine), Gert, (in honor of the maker Gerstenschlager), and by public acclaim the last was called Virgil.

The first ones shook and bounced knocking books off the shelves.

Rain crept in and both drivers and books arrived in the outlying district, soaked clean through.

On one occasion, a little old lady brought her goats to the the bookmobile, with obvious results.

On another, the determination to get the reading material to the public in spite of a snowstorm, resulted in the drivers discovering how much the service meant to the isolated readers.

They found a Christmas party awaiting them.

The name Vancouver Regional Library was established 1961.

In 1965 the headquarters was moved to Strickland Street, where it still is, in a modern and functional home.

By 1961 the Nanaimo Branch was established in new surroundings at Prideaux and Fitzwilliam.

One of the original members of the 1919 group had been responsible in part for this move.

From a budget of $8,213 and a reading population of 22,330 in 1936, the organization now has a $345,235 budget and serves 139,548 people.

Almost as long a history, but possibly more quaint, is that of the Cowichan Library.

Rev. R. Reece of St. Peter's Anglican Church started a reading club in his log cabin home on Trunk Road.

Later, another log cabin was used as the Cowichan Valley Lending Library home.

For a short time a branch was established in Cowichan Bay, but was forgone in favor of drop points there, Maple Bay and Kuper Island.

In 1877 they had established a library board.

A regular visitor there was Miss Ruby Evans who came ever Saturday, walking 14 miles, except once during a big snow storm around 1916.

In 1920 they established a traveling library, but it was dropped almost immediately.

From this beginning, the Duncan Library was formed, and it existed alone until 1947 when it joined with the Union Library.

Fires destroyed records of early libraries in Shawnigan Lake and Parksville, but it is suspected that they too have had almost as long a history.

Qualicum Beach had the only deep freeze library in the world, as its start was beside cold storage lockers in a grocery store until 1963.

The Alberni Library had to institute special fines for the popular book of 1933, Anthony Adverse, by raising them from one cent a day to five cents, so that others could read it.

The 1964 tidal wave almost flooded the library, but only left mud on the floor.

Fortunately the book shelves were high enough to protect the books.

Port Alberni got its start in 1936 by joining the new Union Library, and has developed into one of the largest branches on the island.

Some who have worked for the growth of libraries have done so for years.

R. S. Wood of Ladysmith was one of the founding members there, and served until 1940.

That library had one of the largest collections of religious books.

Lady Dunsmuir answered a request for a donation by sending 200 of them.

However, 600 other books were collected, and diluted the effect somewhat.

They joined with Union Library in 1940.

Mary Moore of Union Bay claims an endurance record for her daughter.

A baby when Mrs. Moore took on the job of librarian in 1949, the daughter has helped for 15 of her 16 years.

The people there might well be the latest library users on record.

One morning Mrs. Moore found a note in the unlocked library that stated someone had come in the midnight hours to borrow a book, because they had run out of reading material.

Chemainus people, determined that their library facilities would not die, held a garden party, and raised a vital $100.

Hardships and lack of funds are the threads that weave the Island library fabric.

Books left in care of grocers, furniture stores and in council chambers is a story told in almost every area.

Lack of help, space, and public apathy have not stopped those with the determination to serve the reading public.

The names of these people are also down in community records for the efforts expended in other areas as well.

They are the quiet leaders.

Most obnoxious denizen of Strait of Georgia is the ubiquitous slash-mouthed dogfish, a pest thoroughly detested by every sport and commercial fisherman. But they need not treat this cold saffron-eyed member of the shark family with too much disdain. It's choice eating.

MUCH-ABUSED DOGFISH MAKES CHOICE EATING

By TOM BROWNE

To meet the demand for this succulent shark-type fish in Europe, Canada's fishery department is paying a subsidy of 11c a pound for up to 225,000 pounds of dogfish fillets. They will be frozen, shipped to West Germany and smoked there. Germany imports fresh dogfish fillets from Norway, but because of a declining catch there, the price has jumped from 23c to 30c a pound.

Say what you will about a dogfish, he's an evil-looking customer to bring out of the water. He comes up like a log, but at the surface puts up a strenuous battle. Be careful with both ends of him because at his tail, just back of the adipose fin, is a dagger about an inch long, sharp as a needle, and if you're a bit reckless you're going to have a mighty sore mitt. Then his mouth is something of which to be wary. Reposing in it are 12 rows of teeth that slice sideways.

Some years ago, while gillnetting for sockeye off the Fraser's sandheads, this writer pulled numerous dogfish from his net. In the darkness—for that type of fishing was always done at night—their skins felt like fine emery paper. I never worried about their mouths until a more experienced fisherman shook his lean, weather-rusted face seriously and said: "You want to lose a finger?"

After that I handled dogfish with respect.

Len Eighton of Vancouver used to fish these ugly sharks off the seawall at Brockton Point—and probably still does. He considers them excellent eating. Len rigged up his gear by using a spark-plug weight, 374-pound test steel leader, and 60-pound test nylon line. Baiting with herring he'd heave the whole works about 100 feet into the chuck. He'd always pick a good fishing time though—about turn of the tide after low slack.

One day Len took 39 dogfish, but after that was skunked for six straight weeks.

He claims dogfish are far more nonfishing than cod. The meat is tasty and boneless. "Sharks haven't a bone in their body, only cartilage in the head and spinal column," he says.

Len talked about the shark's 12 rows of teeth. "That's why I use the steel leader, because they'll bite right through nylon, or even copper of brass."

He said he'd had hooks bitten off, or straightened right out. When a dogfish struck, Len would loop the line around over the railing, explaining: "When he runs, it'll cut right through my hand. I've had hooks chopped right off, or straightened right out. If a big one gets on, you might as well cut the line," he said disgustedly.

Dogfish are long-lived creatures, cruising around for 40 years or more. They carry their young, the mother coming in fairly close to shore in shallow water for her maternity event.

Oldtimers refer to this as "having her pups," but I doubt if this is the proper terminology.

The young grow slowly, attaining about a foot in two years. It takes a decade for one to reach 20 to 30 inches, and a real oldtimer grows to four feet in length.

They have a peculiar habit of running in packs, like wolves. And actually, dogfish are the wolves of the sea.

They play hob with salmon tackle, and even prey on smelt fishermen. A commercial smelter of my acquaintance lost 70 fathoms of new webbing one night when his net was raided by a pack of dogfish. They left thousands of holes in his new net—and no fish—after poking their snouts through the thin webbing to get their low-slung grindley maws at the gilled smelts.

But the much maligned dogfish did his part in the Second World War by providing vitamin A for the armed forces. Source of the vitamin is from the liver which brought fishermen as high as $3.25 a pound. The gutted carcasses were thrown overboard.

Exemptions from military service were granted many of the younger fishermen provided they turned in dogfish livers at least once a week, fair weather or foul. Catching and gutting the fish for their livers was considered essential to the war effort. Dogfishers laid out long lines, baiting hundreds of hooks as they went overboard. The lines were left overnight or longer before being lifted.

After the war, when it was discovered vitamin A could be produced synthetically, catching dogfish became an unprofitable enterprise. And they have multiplied practically ever since unhindered until today, all inside waters are literally alive with the predatory pests.

Dogfish are found from the mouth of the Columbia River northward to Hecate Strait. Some

By FRED WALTER OLSEN

Away back in the 20s a shark made headlines in a Vancouver newspaper. It had followed an incoming freighter into Vancouver harbor. Not much of a story, particularly in view of the fact that B.C. waters teem with numerous species of sharks—10, to be exact. Their numbers must be counted in multiple millions, and this is no exaggeration! More remarkable yet, in 40-odd years of roaming over all the waters of the B.C. coast, the writer's encounters with sharks (aside from the marauding dogfish) have been very rare.

In this age of monsters from Mars and the unfolding miracles of outer space, interest in sharks and other demons of the deep seems to have waned. Still, if all the B.C. coast shark stories were collected and presented, they would make an exciting anthology.

Biologically, the shark is a very primitive creature, a cousin of the tyrannosaur, and like this pea-brained error of creation, should have been extinct millions of years ago.

Officially, the 10 species of sharks in B.C. waters range in size from two to 40 feet. In order of size they are described as follows:

Brown shark: This is the runt of the shark family. A mature specimen grows no longer than two feet, but he possesses all the stigmata of a giant man-eater—the baleful eyes and fearsome rows of teeth and is, no doubt, comparatively terrifying to the lesser creatures upon which he preys. As though ashamed of his diminutive size, he is a chronic inhabitant of the murkiest deep, and when he is incidentally caught on dogfish gear, he is hauled up from depths up to 300 fathoms.

Dogfish: This marauder, known the world over, is regarded by fishermen as the most troublesome pest in the sea. It invariably appears in overwhelming hordes where least wanted and causes mischief and damage to the gear of fishermen engaged in catching other types of fish. During the war it was sought because of the high vitamin A content of its liver. It is a true member of the shark family and grows to a length of five feet.

Soup-fin shark: This is the baby which made headlines during the war years when fishermen started recording up to $20,000 trips to sea. The vitamin content of the liver oil of this species is extremely high and there was a concentrated drive on soup-fins. Needless to say, the result was another case of the goose that laid the golden egg

Sports fishing promoters on Vancouver Island want the pesky dogfish re-named Pacific Shark so it will appeal to visitors as a trophy sports fish worth bragging about. Main proponent of the new name is Oak Bay Marina party fun-fishing operator Bob Wright. Amalgamated Conservation Society, Associated Chamber of Commerce of Vancouver Island and other groups are supporting him.

of them, tagged in United States waters have been taken as far away as Japan.

But Strait of Georgia harbors a non-travelling species that never leaves it.

Dogfish are primarily scavengers, feeding on the bottom, but not always. So they take a heavy toll of herring, smelts, salmon fingerlings and other small fish species.

While the average British Columbian will turn up his nose at the mere mention of eating them, they are relished in Europe, and in Britain, where the whole carcass is marketed, they fetch 20 cents a pound.

With a practically unlimited market abroad, the Canadian government and fishing industry investigated costs of catching and processing dogfish meat. As with other shark species, its flesh deteriorates rapidly, emitting a strong ammonia odor. But iced, it retains its freshness equally as well as any other fish.

Interesting sidelight is that in Germany, even the skin of the dogfish is valuable, being utilized for making furniture polishing cloths.

But with the federal fisheries authorities planning to raise the annual subsidy to $650,000 next year, and with five commercial fishing companies going after them, the dogfish population in sports fishing waters is bound to diminish appreciably.

Meanwhile, sports rodders will be saying little prayers that dogfish will not foul their lines. For wherever dogfish congregate, game fish vanishes.

SHARK HO!

and the species became almost extinct. This shark attains a length of six feet.

Owl shark: Just another shark excepting for its name (the reason for which is obscure) and the fact that it is decorated all over with scattered, round, black spots. Its liver is slightly primed with vitamin but nothing compared with the dogfish and soup fin.

Mackerel shark: This is a 10-foot scrappy demon which will devour anything not big enough to defend itself against him. He is said to be a man-eater. Sport fishermen with a penchant for big game may contact this tiger of the deep in the waters around Mistaken Island during the summer months.

Sleeper shark: This is one of the giants which, luckily, does not hang around where he can do any harm, if there is any harm in him. He mopes sluggishly on the bottom of the sea and eats any living thing that happens along within his reach. His table manners are said to be atrocious. A full-grown specimen measures 25 feet from tip to tail.

Blue shark: If our local 25-foot beauty is the same species of blue shark that roams the seven seas, then, according to one authority, it is "one of the commonest of the man-eating varieties." The trollers and seine fishermen off the west coast of Vancouver Island occasionally encounter this pleasant little fellow but, so far, the shark has always come off second best. It is understood, of course, that our fishermen do not go into the water after him with knives in their teeth. In the old days before the distractions of radio, TV and west coast pubs, enterprising fishermen often made walking sticks from the shark's vertebra.

Thresher shark: This is the only one of our local sharks that employs means other than its teeth for catching its prey. The top fin of the tail is long as the shark's body and it is used like a whip for rounding up and stunning schools of lesser fish which the shark then devours in the orthodox manner. Total length, tail and all, 25 feet.

Mud shark: Another big fellow—26 feet long—occasionally caught by fishermen set-lining for dogfish, often in waters close to Vancouver. By the time the monster is hauled up from the pressure of the depths, it is quite dozey and easily handled. It formerly had some value as a vitamin producer.

Boeking shark: The granddaddy of them all—40 feet long, but for all that, a very dainty nibbler. It feeds on minute marine life which it drains off water by means of whalebone-like rakers along the gills. This great, lumbering oaf of the sea is a real scourge to gill-net fishermen. If a net happens to be laying stretched taut across his course, the hole he leaves in the web would give passage to a 10-ton truck.

However, that is not so bad, as a rent of this description is readily repaired. The costly damage occurs when the net is hanging loose in the water and the monster, in his titanic struggles to free himself from the entangling meshes twists and turns until he has rolled himself up like a cocoon in many fathoms of valuable net web.

To add insult to injury, the skin of the shark secretes a substance, the effect of which, upon a net, is the same as battery acid. If the trouble is taken to disentangle the shark from the net, the tough twine rots in a few days where it has been in contact with the shark's skin.

The question regarding the man-eating propensities of some of our larger sharks naturally comes to mind. There is no case known to the writer where a human being has been attacked by a shark in B.C. waters. This might indicate that our local sharks, are harmless, or it may be for the reason that swimming does not normally take place any distance from shore where sharks are most apt to be encountered.

An incident that occurred a few years ago will give the reader an indication of the potential danger from the last one of our local species. The crew of a tug boat, crossing Hecate Strait with a log raft in tow, noticed a commotion in the water ahead of the vessel. On closer observation it proved to be a six-foot porpoise (normally a speedy swimmer) moving slowly about near the surface as though it were sick, or incapacitated in some manner.

As the vessel drew nearer the crew could see that it was being attacked by a large shark—species undetermined. The shark had bitten huge chunks out of the body of the porpoise and the surrounding water was red with the blood of the unfortunate creature. The shark attacked again and again with a ferocity that chilled the spines of the onlookers. There was no doubt whatever in their minds as to the possible fate of a human swimming in the same waters.

The blue, mackerel and sleeper sharks are noted for their extreme voraciousness, and in spite of records and theories, it would seem that the most sensible rule to follow is to refrain from swimming in waters known to be inhabited by sharks. The cold, brutish brain of the shark conceives nothing of our attempts to pigeon-hole his dietary habits, and his actions, you may be sure, are governed by one dominating instinct—that of hunger, and the urgency of that instinct has compelled even human beings to devour each other.

With a chubby morsel of a human swimming blithely in infested waters, we will leave it to the reader to judge what might be expected from a ravenous shark large and powerful enough to rend to pieces and devour a steer.

FUJI MICR

By MARGARET WILLIAMS

Charles Brown of Brentwood retired from the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in 1959. With his wife Lillian and their 12-year-old daughter, Ellen, he came to the Island from Los Angeles in search of refuge from the turmoil of a great city. He knew Vancouver Island, Victoria particularly, as Lillian's mother was living here. He could think of no more beautiful place than Brentwood where he could fish to his heart's content, cruise among the Gulf Islands in the summer or simply relax and enjoy his retirement.

The Browns bought a house overlooking Brentwood Bay. From their windows they could see the Mill Bay ferry plying her way across the calm or stormy waters and watch the lazy smoke from Bambleton drifting across the blue Malahat hills. This was the quiet paradise they had longed for. They purchased a 21-foot cabin cruiser and spent happy days exploring the beauties of the adjacent islands and inlets.

The telephone rang one morning as Charlie was sitting quietly, minding his own business. The call was from Washington, D.C. He thought it was from the state of Washington and was sure it was one of the engineers of the long distance department of the American T. and T. who are famous for their practical jokes. This, however, was no joke. He was being asked to go to Taiwan as consultant for a new project—to engineer the installation of 14 telephone offices, with dial equipment, on the Island of Formosa.

He went to Washington, D.C., and accepted the job, then spent a month in the states visiting with manufacturers who were interested in building the equipment. In the fall of 1962 he flew to Taipei, toured the island and surveyed the sites for the new installations, writing up the specifications for each job.

Taipei, a city of teeming millions, fascinated Charles Brown. It is an historic spot, one of the old walled cities, over-populated, beautiful, and tragic. He liked the people immensely. He found them honest, overwhelmingly friendly and generous to a fault. He was provided with a young secretary who even wrote letters to his wife and daughter. Charlie encouraged her to use her English vocabulary and today she is a secretary in Rochester, New York.

He was entertained in many beautiful homes and even spent the Chinese New Year with one family, a signal honor. At this time of the year the family comes from all parts of the world, from Singapore, India, England, the States and Canada, wherever they happen to be and providing they are affluent enough. Beautiful hotels are kept for the housing of those who come from overseas.

At the end of seven months the specifications were completed for the 14 telephone control offices. These were spread throughout the length of the island which is very densely populated. It is about the size of Vancouver Island with a population of some 3,000,000 people. The Chinese engineers he had on his committee had all been educated in western universities with the exception of one who had attended a university in Japan. He was an Aborigine, one of the original Taiwanese who are really Polynesians, not Chinese.

Charlie lived in a Friends of China club run principally by Chinese Rotarians. There were 10 or a dozen rooms occupied mostly by United Nations personnel who had come to the country to aid in building dams and developing resources. Accredited foreign correspondents were also allowed to put up at the club, situated across the square from the government palace. The club boasted a chef par excellence who understood western food and who had practised his art in Rome, Paris and Madrid.

When Charlie requested him to put on a western style Christmas dinner for the Chinese engineering committee members and their wives he was, he confesses, a little worried about the mince pies. He arranged everything through the head waiter whom he had nicknamed "Joshua" because of his resemblance to an old Hebrew prophet. Joshua said: "I fix."

"Mince pies?" asked Charlie.

"I ask," replied Joshua.

Yes, the chef had made many mince pies! The dinner was delicious, beautifully served, with the appropriate wines for each course and the mince pies were perfect. A strange dinner for the Chinese, but apparently much enjoyed.

Charlie recalls some very tough T-Bone steaks at the Friends of China club. They were served sizzling hot in the best style but were almost unchewable. One day he grabbed Joshua and asked about these steaks. Water buffalo perhaps? Some poor old water buffalo who had died of old age somewhere? It certainly was NOT beef! This caused much merriment in the kitchen and sometime after that he was served with a really fine steak.

Occasionally real beef does come from Japan, the famous Kobe steer beef. These cattle are raised almost like sacred animals, fattened and killed young. They are never at any time allowed to get even their hooves muddy.

One of the almost insurmountable difficulties in the work at Taiwan was the effort at communication on a highly technical level between the Chinese and English languages. "One of the peculiarities of human nature," says Charlie, "is the inability or even unwillingness to understand." In this connection many painfully executed drawings were used—electrical diagrams being practically a universal language. He made use of the Chinese who did understand to get through to the others. As a Japanese professor of semantics at San Francisco, under whom Charlie took a course, used to say: "People mean—NOT SAY!"

He recalls with amusement that one Chinese engineer was named Wen—pronounced ONE—K.C. In the technical language of electronics ONE K.C. is a test tone of one kilocycle and this caused much mirth among the engineers.

A cherished possession is a silver plaque from the Taiwan Telecommunication Administration, Ministry of Communications, expressing their sincere appreciation of his "friendship, co-operation and excellent service" and signed by a number of "cordial friends." This was an unprecedented honor and was given to him in secrecy in order that others should not expect similar treatment!

The Browns have several beautiful water colors of the impressionist school which were presented to Charles by a professor of art, Hu Chai, at the University of Taiwan.

Each morning the restaurant carried, in wheelbarrows and on backs, and set up on a causeway under a bridge and here Charlie would buy the huge egg rolls which he loved and other spicy Chinese dishes of pork and rice. Each evening at nine o'clock the restaurant was dismantled and the family went home for the night to their humble and crowded hut.

Another painting is of the famous temple where a story-teller gathered about him 30 or 40 children and adults, Charlie among them. He much enjoyed this aspect of the Chinese character, the respect and veneration accorded the old man by the younger generation.

A third water color is of a Dutch fort. This was built in the early 1600s by the Dutch in an attempt to colonize Formosa as they did the Dutch East Indies. A Chinese general Xaozhing laid siege to the fort and drove them from the island. He then converted it to a temple, his way of showing that the Chinese preferred peace to war, the ploughshare to the sword.

Charlie admired the Oriental religions in many ways, particularly Confucianism, where the whole effort, he says, is to improve oneself while living, with little thought for the afterlife. In one temple, and he visited a great many, is a huge

If you find that your expenses and resourcefulness are lacking in providing for your vacation this summer, you will find that an excursion to the west coast of Vancouver Island will be a relaxation to your worrying mind. You might even become an explorer and earn a trained eye for beauty, such as I did, when venturing in the vast rain forest.

TOFINO

By I. J. RENNIE

When I began my tour on the Alberni-Tofino Highway, I had envisioned sights of huge Douglas fir trees, hazy fog, and vegetation similar to that of South Vietnam. I didn't see any of the aforementioned, but I wasn't entirely disappointed. This was my first trip to the west coast, and I quickly re-examined my previous attitude. The Douglas firs are of fair size, but are incomparable to those situated in Cathedral Grove near Alberni. The fog isn't in good appearance until winter arrives, and the vegetation is similar to that of eastern Vancouver Island.

The highway to the communities of Tofino and Ucluelet commences at Alberni, and overlooks Sproat Lake on a 10-mile stretch. The highway had been under the control of logging companies until a short time ago, when the restriction on weekday traffic was removed. Now, tourists are flocking to the road in huge numbers. The passageway to the west coast is undeniably, as is the scenery and grandeur of the 10-mile trip.

As you look into the hills, you may see the remains of a forest fire, or the hillsides stripped of their trees. You'll see a mountain peak or two, capped with snow on blue backgrounds. Mountain streams gushing a hundred feet or so below your car may be missed, but a visitor never will forget the crisp, cold mountain lakes.

Somewhere in the forest, a paved road meets the gravel road. It takes you to a crossroads, where a map has been planted for visitors. My first choice on the large-scale map, provided by the provincial government, is Ucluelet.

Upon arrival at this community, I watched a seaplane embark and a ferry dock, simultaneously. Do any of my readers remember the scene of a fish cannery community in the movie Los Palaces? Ucluelet is reminiscent of that movie. Here, bold fishboats are neatly sheltered from the Pacific, and brave fishermen prepare for their next fishing trips.

Holiday in the Rain Forest

It is a community which depends upon the bank, the Co-Op, and the industries of mining, logging, and fishing, to keep its economy at a steady pace. There is a uniqueness in this community's problems.

A visitor tried to cash a cheque at a local bank, for example, and stated he would pay for the cost of a verification phone call to his personal bank branch. The banker was unable to phone the visitor's bank, and so, took a risk on the cheque. It seems that a forest fire had quite naturally broken the telephone lines.

One late afternoon recently, residents were perturbed with the fact that they had run short of water for the supper hour. The water line, which passes under the harbor, had been cut by a boat. Both of these incidents occurred in the space of two days. I feel sure that the days aren't always as hectic on the west coast, as they sometimes appear to be.

As for statistics, both Ucluelet and Tofino each have their own volunteer fire departments. There is one RCMP constable at Tofino, and two constables stationed at Ucluelet. Ucluelet's population is approximately 800 people during the summer months.

The cost of some foodstuffs is higher than the general average, due mainly to extra freight costs. Most goods, however, are reasonably well-priced.

The standard of cuisine is of a high degree. I suppose because operators cater to tourists extensively, their best efforts must be put forth.

At one cafe in Ucluelet, the price tag reflecting on a mirror, indicated that a cup of coffee was 15 cents. If you like seafood, take the chance of your holiday, and eat at one of the dining rooms in the area. Travel to Tofino and enjoy a plate of local oysters, or stay in Ucluelet and enjoy fried fish-fillets.

The highway connecting the two communities is in freeway condition, and the average speed is 50 miles an hour.

Long Beach and Wickaninnish Beach will never forget their visitors. Lumber and mining magnates have flown over them; while tourists have slept on their beaches; beach burns have lived in their empty cabins; surfers have drunk their sparkling, green waters; cameramen have fallen in love with their beauty; their sandy tracks have become havens for the motorcycle enthusiasts; and finally, the beaches have become the competitor of eastern Vancouver Island beaches.

In describing Long Beach, it can be pointed out, that it is a horseshoe-shaped bay, with a beautiful sandy beach much like that of Birch Bay on the American mainland, or Patricia Bay on southern Vancouver Island. But, it is incomparable with any of our beaches in British Columbia. There are miles of sandy beach, and it hasn't been exploited yet. There are only a few permanent homes in the area at the moment, and a number of people have planted trailers on government-leased lots.

Many visitors have expressed interest in the leasing of government property, for use in building summer homes. The rental charge is approximately $10 a year, plus about $40 a year in taxes.

There is a provincial campsite, located above the beach, with restrooms and drinking water available. A qualified naturalist, provided by the parks branch of the department of recreation and conservation, is on duty at the beach during the summer. Every evening, there is a discussion at a camp meeting, commencing about 8 p.m. In the morning, at about 10 a.m., the naturalist discusses and gives an informative tour of the area. It is to be noted that here is a permanent object available, known as the Long Beach Wreck, for the explored-minded vacationist.

Camping is allowed on the beach, and driving your car is a must, as the beach stretches for miles. The view from the beach is magnificent. It's like looking from Victoria's Dallas Road towards the Olympic Range, except, you don't see any mountains here. You'll see the green, or turquoise, or blue Pacific, as far as the human eye will allow; only the white horizon will banish a complete view.

Perhaps, you may cut some of the beautiful driftwood for your mantlepiece, or to make coffee tables and lamps. You might discover one of the Japanese glass floats that has washed ashore. The Oriental fishermen use the floats to support nets in the Pacific, whereas honeymooning couples have treasured them as lifelong keepsakes. Or you could come upon one of the numerous wristwatches released by a Japanese company, a short time ago, to test the quality of the watches and to test the prominence of ocean currents. You may even discover that the clothes you left lying on the beach in the early evening, were found to be damp at sundown.

Whatever you have discovered, of invisible or visible form, Long Beach has done so, a million times over.

If you find that supplies are down, take a short trip of 10 miles to Tofino, and replenish

HONOLULU, HAWAII. ALOHA!

Pineapple and Hawaii are synonymous . . . you just can't think of one without the other. After the fruit's adventures through many chapters of history, Hawaii eventually (at the turn of the century) became the adopted home of this golden-hearted fruit. Now these islands of the Pacific produce 70 per cent of the world's pineapple.

This morning we went over the Dole pineapple plant, the largest cannery in the world under one roof. It covers nearly 80 acres. You can see the huge replica of a pineapple on top of the main building from almost everywhere in Honolulu. It is set on a steel tower 180 feet high and the pineapple itself is 180 feet 3 inches tall. It is used as a water tower and holds 100,000 gallons of water.

Taps in the reception room rush pineapple juice as well as ice water. We ate all the fresh pineapple we wished on the completion of our tour. If you have never tasted fresh-cut, sun-ripened pineapple you have not lived. It is a taste to remember. Pineapple juice with a pineapple spear for a muddler is the Hawaiian drink of welcome.

Here in Hawaii, hotels and restaurants serve pineapple in many unique ways . . . at the Queen's Surf you eat delectable baked chicken with sticks of pineapple inserted to replace the bones. Pineapple accompanies ham in dozens of ways. Sweet-sour pineapple sauces go with Hawaiian spare ribs and roast pork.

You eat this lovely fruit fresh for breakfast; it is an important ingredient of salads. It is the perfect fruit accent for desserts . . . fresh pineapple pie, pineapple cake and custard, fresh pineapple cubes tossed with sweet coconut chips and for the most elegant and popular dessert give me rum soaked pineapple spooned over vanilla ice cream.

Polynesians know the value of eye appeal . . . Hawaiian food is beautiful to look at. Food is arranged with color contrasts in mind, vanda orchid blossoms float in drinks and every salad wears a flower garnish (usually a colorful hibiscus). Hawaiian salad and buffet bars are spectacular . . . some of these are set up against a mirrored wall with concealed lighting. The food is displayed in giant clam shells and large colorful bowls embedded in cracked ice. The whole is garlanded with leafy greens and flowers. Truly a magnificent sight, enough to tempt the most lagard appetite.

Bride's Corner

To add a Hawaiian touch to lemon pie . . . add one 13-oz. can crushed pineapple (well drained) to a cooked lemon pie filling. Or put a layer of well-drained pineapple chunks into a baked pie shell before pouring in the lemon filling.

For a delicious coconut pie shell . . . melt 4 Tbsp. butter or margarine in a pie plate (9 or 10-inch); into this press about 1 cup sweet, long-shred coconut or coconut flakes. Build the sides up well. Bake in a 325-degree Fahrenheit oven until golden. Chill before filling.

Add 1/2 cup flaked or shredded coconut to waffle or hot cake batter. Banana Cream Pie tasted different in Honolulu but I found out the secret . . . the banana slices are soaked for an hour in pineapple juice, then well drained before they are added to pie.

Sesame seeds, toasted and slightly crushed (to bring out the flavor) are used a great deal in Hawaiian cooking. Add 1/4 cup coated sesame seeds to pie crust ingredients for a nice crunch. Well toasted in butter, these delicious little seeds are sprinkled over broiled fish fillets. Sprinkle the toasted seeds over cooked vegetables. Use them instead of nuts in a plain sugar cookie recipe, as a crisp addition to stuffings and, of course, as a crunchy topper for dinner rolls. Roll pieces of hot fried chicken into sesame seeds and return to the frying pan just long enough to brown the seeds. Unfortunately this little trick nearly doubles the calorie count of the chicken . . . but for a special occasion meal it is good.

You will find this rich little seed does wonders sprinkled over fruit salad, atop a casserole, or added to 'most anything you cook or bake.

IN HAWAII, IT'S PINEA

MURIEL WILSON REPORTS FROM HONOLULU

Some salads are presented in hollowed out pineapple shells. Next time you entertain perhaps you would like to try this Hawaiian Olive-Lobster Salad in Pineapple Shells . . .

OLIVE-LOBSTER SALAD IN PINEAPPLE SHELLS . . . 1 ripe pineapple, 2 cups dairy sour cream, 2 Tbsp. lemon juice, 1 tsp. salt, 1/2 to 1 Tbsp. curry powder, 1/2 cup chutney, 4 cups chopped cooked lobster (or you can use shrimp or crab or a mixture of sea food), 1 cup sliced pineapple stuffed olives and 1/4 cup toasted almonds. Leaving the crown on the pineapple, halve pineapple and crown lengthwise. Carefully cut the fruit out in wedges, leaving the shell 1/2 inch thick. Remove core and cut fruit into 1 1/2 inch wedges. Blend with sour cream, lemon juice, salt, curry and chutney. Toss dressing lightly with sea food, olives and pineapple wedges. Heap in pineapple shells and sprinkle with almonds slivered. Serve with the dressing of your choice.

A dessert salad can also be served in pineapple shells. Prepare the shells and the cut-out fruit same as for the above salad. The pineapple is mixed with sliced bananas and cut up papaya and avocado. Sweet shredded coconut is mixed with the fruit, then piled in the prepared shells. Lime juice mixed with honey is one of the dressings used with this salad. At home the fresh pineapple chunks or wedges could be mixed with well drained canned fruit salad then heaped in the pineapple shells. Fresh pineapple are now seen quite often in our Victoria supermarkets.

In a tiny restaurant just off Kakaia Avenue we ate a delightful dessert. It too was served from a pineapple shell but I was told it can be frozen and served in parfait glasses. I was fortunate enough to get the recipe.

SAUTERNE MOUSSE . . . 1 pineapple, 1/4 cup white sugar, 1/4 cup brown sugar tightly packed, 3 Tbsp. cornstarch, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1 egg, 1 tsp. butter, 1/2 cup sauterne, 1 tsp. lemon juice and 1/2 pint cream whipped. Cut the pineapple in half lengthwise, remove fruit from shell and shred. Put the pulp in a saucepan with the white sugar and stir well. Cook over low heat until fruit is transparent, no liquid is needed because the heat extracts the juice to form a syrup. This takes about 15 minutes. Now drain the juice from the cooked fruit and cool separately. Measure the brown sugar, cornstarch and salt into the top part of a double boiler, blend well. Break the egg into this and beat it in thoroughly. Gradually add the pineapple syrup. Cook over hot water until it thickens. Take from heat and add butter, stir until melted. Let mixture cool completely. When cold stir in sauterne and lemon juice, then the drained fruit. Last fold in whipped cream. Heap into pineapple shells or frozen. Garnish with maraschino cherries and macadamia nuts. At home you could use almonds. Of course you can buy the macadamia nuts in glass jars at the grocery specialty departments.

Certainly there is no fruit more versatile than the pineapple . . . whatever you do with it . . . grill it, curry it or devil it, it comes up with that field fresh flavor. For brunches or suppers . . . top slices of French toast with cheese, then a slice of grilled ham and a pineapple slice on top. Grill under the broiler until cheese is bubbly and pineapple lightly golden.

Another luncheon dish combines deviled ham, pork and beans and crushed pineapple . . . saute a tin of deviled ham with 1 onion finely chopped. Mix in a tin of pork and beans, 2 Tbsp. each brown sugar and catsup, and ¼ tsp. dry mustard. Pour into a casserole and top with crushed pineapple. Bake in a 350 degree F. oven for 30 minutes. Here fresh pineapple is used but I'm sure canned crushed pineapple could be used.

Curried shrimp and pineapple are wonderful served over fluffy, hot rice. In ¼ cup butter or margarine saute a pound of cooked shrimp with 1 cut-up green pepper and 3 chopped green onions until the pepper is crisply cooked. Stir in 1½ tsp. curry powder, ¼ cup heavy cream and 2 cups pineapple chunks. Cover and cook 5 minutes. Serve hot over rice.

Of course Hawaii has become commercialized . . . we expected that. It is 16 years since we first visited these lovely islands and there have been many changes. More luxury hotels, more shops, more cars and more people but there are some things that are exactly the same . . . the balmy, flower-scented air, the warm ocean (at least 74 degrees), the soft Hawaiian music and pretty hip-swaying Hula girls. The sun still blesses the land and there is still the magic of a tropic moon. The warmth of the old time Hawaiian hospitality has been tarnished a bit by big business but happiness and gaiety are still a way of life. If you crave solitude . . . this can be found on the Outer Islands.

Happiness is sitting under an enormous banyan tree on a starlit night sipping a tall exotic drink. Here are the ingredients for one you can serve back there at home . . .

MOANA BANYAN PUNCH . . . Into a 14-oz. glass pour 1½ oz. light rum, 1 oz. pineapple juice, ½ oz. lime or lemon juice, 1 oz. guava juice (you can buy it in cans at home) and 1 tsp. grenadine. Fill the glass with shaved ice, stir well and garnish with a vanda orchid. You may have to omit the orchid. Okole Mahuna! (bottoms up).

We travel a great deal by automobile.

When I get a map, I cut out the portion we will need for the trip and paste it on heavy cardboard. I paste half on one side of the cardboard and half on the other. I leave space on each side of the map to make notes (good motels, places to eat, etc.) This beats wrestling with a big map and is real neat. I keep the map clipped to the sun visor when not in use.

DEAR HELOISE:

The next time you want to change thread in your sewing machine, instead of removing the spool and re-threading the whole machine, snip the thread off close to the spool.

Then tie the new thread to the end you cut. From the needle end, pull the old thread through and the new thread follows.

The knot should pass all the stations on your machine except the eye of the needle. You have only to snip off the knot and thread the needle. This method saves me time, nerves and eyesight.

TRICK OF THE WEEK

DEAR HELOISE:

I keep three very similar keys on my key ring.

I glued a small piece of sandpaper on each side of my front door key. Now, even in the dark, I can find the right key instantly.

DEAR HELOISE:

I enjoy your hints and ideas, so here's one for you. I cut the gummed part off all the unsealed envelopes from advertisements that come in the mail, and use them when I need a label. After all, they're FREE.

A Reader

DEAR HELOISE:

After getting a big blister on the palm of my hand from using garden tools, I hit on what I think is a good idea. I took a foam rubber sponge (oblong), folded it in half lengthwise and sewed the sides and one end together with overcast stitches. I slip it over the handle of the tool I wish to use.

Of course, the sponge gets dirty, but when I am through with one session of chores, I simply wash out the sponge and it is clean for the next time.

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever have to look all over the house for a pencil to mark important dates on the calendar?

Well, here's a way to keep a pencil always handy: Take the top from an old ball-point or fountain pen, turn it upside down and fasten the clip to the bottom of the calendar. Then put the pencil down into the opening. You'll always have a pencil ready when you need it.

Arthur E. Chalker

DEAR HELOISE:

When going on a trip, we fill a hand lotion bottle (dispenser or squeeze type) with some soapy water. In another bottle we take along plain water. Then we just squeeze away when our hands need washing.

Adventure Story
by
CECIL CLARK

It was a few weeks ago in the snug warmth of his cosy little sitting room at 815 North Park that Herbert Watson and I ruminated, as Mr. Pickwick once put it, on the strange mutability of human affairs.

Bert Watson, now 67, being an ex-Stony Mountain Penitentiary guard, the conversation occasionally echoed to the rumble of cell doors, the clink of keys and talk of the everlasting "count." For though their bodies are temporarily in suspension in this monastic little Manitoba retreat, the minds keep working. Which occasionally makes for interest and excitement.

"I saw where you recently wrote a story about Roediger," said Bert with a smile of recollection. "I had him once, you know. In the west wing."

Apparently Canada's Bluebeard had also a sense of humor for, according to Bert, when once a button came off his shirt he remarked: "Just imagine a man who has had 15 wives, and now he has to sew his own buttons on."

However it was mention of Winnipeg and Earl Nelson that spurred my interest.

"You knew him?" I asked.

"I just about lived with him," said Bert "that is, until his luck ran out—on Friday the 13th!"

Which happened to be on a January morning in 1928. But it was on a May morning in 1927 that the queer fellow first came to anyone's notice, at least, in Manitoba.

A young married woman driving in to a Women's Institute meeting in Emerson, passed a man thrumming a ride. She slowed, looked in the rear view mirror and as he jog trotted toward her something about him roused suspicion. Maybe it was his face she didn't like. Anyway she changed her mind and stopped on the gas.

A day or two later, on a Wednesday morning, Mrs. Smith of Smith Street in Winnipeg rented a room to a short, thick set man, about 35 years of age. He said he was a newcomer to the city, fortunate to get immediate employment but it was on a night shift. He didn't want to be disturbed in the daytime. In fact she couldn't enter his room; he'd do his own cleaning up.

It was that night that 14-year-old Lola Cowan disappeared. She had a sister, partially paralyzed who made artificial flowers, which Lola used, to sell from door to door. Suddenly on one street, Lola vanished completely.

It was a day or two later that Mrs. Smith's nooses went across the river to the suburb of Elmwood and rented a room at 100 Riverton Avenue from the Pattersons. Twenty-seven-year-old Mrs. Emily Patterson, just out from Ireland a week or two, had joined her husband (an Eaton's employee) with two small children, three and four years old.

When Patterson came home from work the next evening he found the children outside, cold, hungry and crying. The said they hadn't seen their mother all day, and from enquiry nobody had been seen around the house. Though his wife was a newcomer to Winnipeg, Patterson hardly thought she could be lost. He phoned a few mutual friends, checked with the police and the hospital, and then with growing fear clutching at his heart, searched round the nearby streets. Toward midnight, exhausted, he felt he had done all he could for one day and decided to get some sleep. It was at his bedside that for a moment he dropped to his knees to seek in prayer some Higher assistance. As he arose, he noticed something showing under the bed. It was his wife's body!

The police were quickly on the scene, to deduce that the unfortunate woman had been strangled. Only clue was something under her fingernails—traces of human skin.

This was on a Sunday night when Mrs. Smith over on Smith Street happened to be listening to a radio broadcast from Young United Church. Suddenly the service was interrupted by a bulletin from the Winnipeg City Police, giving the description of Mrs. Patterson's roomer and the warning to the public that a stranger might be at large.

Somehow in a flash of intuition Mrs. Smith bethought herself of her own strange lodger, whom she hadn't seen for a day or two. She phoned the police and minutes later a couple of city detectives were on her doorstep. They took a quick look round the vacant upstairs room, then made a discovery. Under the bed was the body of Lola Cowan. She too had been strangled!

Mrs. Smith's description of her lodger tallied with the Patterson description, and promptly there were more radio bulletins warning householders not to admit strangers. From then on Winnipeg got itself into a bit of a ferment, with delivery boys and door to door canvassers the object of suspicion. Even motor readers were viewed with distrust. While the city police in their city wide hunt checked a thousand rooming houses and hotels, they also served through a hundred suspects brought in for questioning. One half-witted creature walking the tracks had 1200 in his pocket and couldn't say where he got it. Meantime anxious householders made a run on locks and door chains. One hardware store sold 14 dozen door chains in one morning.

It was a barber at the north end, near Higgins and Main, who first waved the police on the right accent. A customer who said he was just in from the bunk, not only wanted a hair cut and shave but also a change of clothing. The barber referred him across the street to a second hand store. He bought a suit all right, and left his old one. It was a suit belonging to Patterson. This left the police with another thought; he must still be wearing Patterson's belt with the silver buckle with the letter "P."

Came next the information that the suspect had been seen in the Blue Store near Portage and Main, where he bought a new suit and a pair of shoes. He changed right on the premises and told the proprietor to give the old clothes to the Sally Ann. When the clothing was examined it was the suit bought in the Higgins Avenue second hand store. The salesman at the Blue Store had watched his customer depart, even saw him board a Headingly Street car. The motormen were all checked out, and one was found who remembered the man who got off at the end of the line.

From the end of the line ensued a province wide hunt, but it wasn't until eight or nine days later that word came from Regina of a stranger trying to make friends with a small girl at a public playground. The mother called the child away, then notified the police. Though the stranger vanished, the description tallied with the wanted man. Then in a second hand store in town Mrs. Patterson's wedding ring turned up. From a description there was no doubt who had sold it, but again like a phantom he had vanished.

It was a week later, now the middle of June, that a man walked into a small grocery store in Napinka, in south-west Manitoba close to the U.S. border. It was one of those grey overcast days when, without the sun, the featureless plains give no hint of direction. The stranger bought some crackers and cheese, said he was just up from the States, and wondered if there was any farm work offering.

The storekeeper referred him to a farmer "a couple of miles north and a mile east." He even went out in the street to show him which way was north. As the man set off, for some reason the storekeeper kept him in sight. Then when he saw him turn south instead of north, came a dawning suspicion. He phoned the provincial police at nearby Killarney and Constables Gray and Jenkins sped to the scene. At the storekeeper's direction they went after the fugitive who, when he saw he was being overtaken by two policemen in a car, jumped a fence and tried to hide in a sough. He was up to his chest in water when Const. Gray grappled him out.

Back at Napinka the storekeeper said: "Yes, that's the man" and the prisoner was whisked off to Killarney and a cell. They didn't know who they had, but Gray and Jenkins were going to find out.

It was that evening when the solitary night man went upstairs for something from his overcoat pocket, that suddenly he heard a suspicious sound, like the rattle of the coal chute. Dashing downstairs he found the prisoner gone, but gone in only his pants. His shoes, socks, shirt and coat were drying in the boiler room.

Again it was Gray and Jenkins back to the hunt, aided by about every able-bodied man in Killarney, armed with hurricane lanterns, shot-guns, rifles, even pitchforks.

The stranger, who had proved himself nimble and quick-witted in the past, now proved it again. He gained entry to an unoccupied house and fitted himself out with a suit of clothes. Only thing he lacked was shoes, and the only thing he could find was a pair of skating boots with tube skates attached. With almost superhuman strength he actually wrenched the skates from the boots with his hands. Then arming himself with a lantern and a club, he had the nerve to join a group of searchers. Maybe it was from their stray remarks that he learned word had gone to Winnipeg, and a squad of police would be in on an early morning train to aid in the search. It was just before daylight that the wail of a whistle announced the arrival of the special, the cue for the stranger to get on the other side of the tracks from the station and slip under a cattle loading ramp.

When the train stopped, the police piled out, the plan being for the train to go a mile out of town, switch the engine, then return to Winnipeg.

As the tramping feet departed and the train started to move on, the fugitive slipped out from under the ramp and leaped aboard. However, there was one precaution the law had taken; a policeman remained in each car.

It was one of them who immediately yanked the emergency cord, then launched himself at the killer.

With the stranger wearing handcuffs, three quick blasts on the engine whistle told the searchers the hunt was over. One methodical policeman deprived the prisoner of his leather

It was with considerable relief that the public of Winnipeg heard later that the strangler was safe in a cell in Rupert Street police station; and when Chief of Police Chris Newton said "safe" he meant S-A-F-E. He had a guard in the cell with the prisoner, another just outside, right round the clock. One of the guards was a 27-year-old Irishman from Co. Tyrone called Bert Watson.

Committed for trial, in due course the strangler appeared before Mr. Justice Dypart at the November assize. When the jury said "Guilty," he was sentenced to die on the gallows on Friday, Jan. 13, 1928.

Bert Watson hadn't been long in Canada, for as the youngest of a family of 13, he had left Castlederg one spring morning in 1924. He must have caught the Derry train at Victoria Bridge, wich was the same moment that three laughing colleens from nearby Newtonstewart got in with him. They found they were all going to Canada, an it was in Winnipeg a couple of years later that Bert Watson married the eldest of the three, Sarah Jane. Which means they have been married 41 years.

From the job of guarding the strangler, Bert
Watson served a nitc with the Manitoba Provincial Police, and after that the staff of the federal prison at Stony Mountain. It was just after the outbreak of war in 1939, he told me, that in attempting to stop a prison break he suffered head injuries that have given him trouble ever since. Injuries, by the way, for which there was no compensation.

It was over a pot of tea that I asked him if he learned anything of Nelson's background while he was on the death watch.

"Oh, he was a man that needed putting away, all right," was the way he put it, "though he was known to us as Earl Nelson, down in the States he was Virgil Wilson or Adrian Harris. The police in Portland, Oregon, identified him as a man who had strangled a Mrs. Blance Myers there; and the Seattle police wanted him for strangling a Mrs. Monks. Apparently his finger prints were all over the scene in both crimes."

"How did he behave toward the end?"

"He got a bit excited at times. I remember one night he wanted all the Winnipeg street cars stopped."

"What for?"

"Said he couldn't sleep. He made such a scene we had to bring the jail governor, Downie, down around midnight. He also wanted all the CPR shunting stopped in the yards. Of course it was about 35 below which makes it even noisier.
Anyway the governor smoothed him down."

"On the very last night," Bert went on,
"there was a church bell nearby that struck the hours. Every time it struck he would leap out of his bunk, shaking and sweating."

"And filled him with fantastic terrors never felt before," I remarked.

Bert gave me a wondering look.

"That was a line from Edgar Allen Poe," I said. "He knew all about such things."

Holiday in the Rain Forest

both your stock and your mind. That is to say, remind yourself that civilization still exists.

Similarly, Tofino appears much like the Alaskan cannery town, filmed in Ice Palace. The population is about 600 people, and is somewhat smaller than Ucluelet. It is the headquarters on the west coast for B.C. Airlines, which operates chartered flights for tourists and businessmen, as well as for men working in the region.

The economy depends mainly upon logging, fishing of all types, mining, and tourism. The hospital at Tofino serves both communities.

As both Tofino and Ucluelet are now the largest centres on the west coast of the Island, they will no doubt increase in size, mainly due to the tourist industry. At the present time, the only centre which really caters to the tourists, is Wickaninnish Inn situated on the beach of its name. Both of the communities have expanding accommodation units, and these will soon be assets to the tourist trade.

Residents of the region, it appears, are puzzled in their wishes for the future. The general belief was that they didn't want their west coast area to be turned into a Coney Island-type resortland, yet they wanted the modern conveniences of the outside world. This particular fact rests upon the future paving of the Alberni-Tofino Highway. The provincial government has been alert to the methods of exploiters, and as seen in other areas, has prevented outrageous practices such as those committed on the west coast of the United States.

Many tourists have remarked that they cannot see how residents can live without the movie theatre, the golf course, etc. There are a number of factors, such as the amount of money available, the population, and the use of facilities, that will always affect recreational needs.

The area does have bowling and billiards, as well as social get-togethers.

Fishing and hunting abound in the area for the sportsmen, but the summer tourist has little chance to experience either. In our tourist pamphlets, the promoters always comment on the excellent fresh-water fishing. The truth never mentioned, is that the only exciting fishing available is in mountain lakes rather than in streams. The mountain creeks which were once flourishing with fish life, have now been stripped by our forest industry.

The logging companies strip the mountains and hillsides of their trees, leaving a line of trees which they hope will hold back the spring run-off and keep soil intact. When spring arrives, however, the run-off is tremendous. Fish eggs are destroyed by the raging torrent, and the fish that do survive, usually don't live to see the summer.
Streams dry up or become too shallow, because those trees that once regulated the amount of runoff, aren't there now, to even feel water. If you're a passive fisherman, though, you might enjoy getting your boots wet.

The hunting of game also affords great pleasure in winter, yet it too, is affected by the stripped hillsides which once provided shelter and food.

At the moment, it would be a good approach to have a feasibility report made, to see if the tourists statements are warranted.

Finally, everywhere the visitor will find beauty. Even though domestic beauty such as that of homes and gardens does not reign over the area, you will find that Nature provides the crowning touch on your holiday to the rain forest.

A chance discovery in a Sooke garden has focussed new attention upon what more and more scientists are coming to believe: That Christopher Columbus was but an also-ran in the historic race for America.

WAS COLUMBUS A LATECOMER BY MORE THAN 3,000 YEARS?

T. W. PATERSON

While digging in the roots of a fallen tree, Mrs. Audrey Pears uncovered the squatting figure of a man in the form of a bowl. According to provincial museum anthropology curator Donald Abbott, the figurine may be 2,000 years old. In fact, Mrs. Pears' little stone man may be considerably older—dating far beyond the day our present native race appeared on the local scene.

These intriguing figures have not been the only discoveries in British Columbia. Other mysterious objects have been unearthed. Despite lengthy research, they remain but tantalizing clues to a long vanished, highly-civilized people which may have once inhabited the entire west coast—settlers from other continents.

The artifact that probably reaches farthest back into the mists of time is Megburn Stone, a boulder found near Nanaimo River many years ago. Carved on this oval rock is a face. The strange stone was uncovered 55 feet below the surface, beneath a 640-year-old cedar. As far as experts can determine, this crude work of art goes back at least 15,000 years.

Nanaimo offers further evidence of B.C.'s first visitors; this relic supports the theories that Columbus was a latecomer by more than 3,000 years. The late historian H. A. McKelvie told the story in a Vancouver daily in 1932.

"When the streets of Nanaimo were being laid out," the famous journalist wrote, "The road superintendent discovered, 11 feet underground, a Japanese sword. It was sheathed in a wooden scabbard, that was protected with closely wound silvered copper wire. The handle was of shark skin. The blade had not deteriorated by rusting."

"A Japanese archaeologist who inspected it declared the sword to be of great antiquity."

Mr. McKelvie went on to mention province-wide discoveries of figures which strongly resemble Mrs. Pears' find. Earlier, he described what must be the two most intriguing and important finds of all:

Miners cutting a trench into a Cassiar hillside, 25 years ago, were startled to hear their shovels strike metal. Carefully clearing the weird object, a gruff prospector stared curiously at his find, brass coins threaded on an iron rod. Although the rod crumbled at his touch, the coins safely reached Victoria. The official verdict: They were minted in China 2,000 years before the birth of Christ! How did the treasure find its way to an isolated hill in B.C.'s Cassiar?

Nor is this the only such discovery. Telegraph Creek has yielded relics of early Oriental origin. Again consulting Mr. McKelvie, we learn that, years ago, "the Chinese interpreter from the supreme court at Victoria encountered Indians who had possession of several solid silver Buddhist ceremonial dishes. They said that they found them beneath the roots of a very large tree. They would not part with the bowls but did give the interpreter a big brass disc—some 2½ inches in diameter—one of several found in one of the dishes."

Bringing the disc to Victoria, the interpreter presented it to a collector, Judge Eli Harrison. His Honor was so interested in his new prize that he sent it to American experts for analysis. The authorities identified it as a "Buddhist charm, of a type that had not been manufactured for more than 1,500 years."

Again we ask: How did it come to rest deep in the earth near Telegraph Creek?

For the answers, sketchy as they are, we must reach deep into Oriental folklore. For Chinese legend tells of a strange land visited by wandering Buddhist priests many centuries ago—a land that would appear to be North America's west coast, from Alaska to California, and beyond.

Scientists still argue vehemently as to the authenticity of the legend, but, upon considering the findings of Japanese sword, Chinese coins and Buddhist charms is it beyond the realm of possibility? Judge for yourself.

Evidences of early Viking and Welsh visits to our continent have made headlines in recent years, present historians seeming to have forgotten or rejected the fascinating journal of one Hsui-sin. This Chinese monk returned to his homeland from a long journey in 699 A.D. There he reeked a memoir which has intrigued—and outraged—scientists to this day...

According to Hsui-sin:

- The Kingdom of Fusang lay to the east;
- It was named after the fusang tree, which was very plentiful and important, its red, pear-like fruit and "bamboo" shoots being great delicacies, its bark being used in the manufacture of linen, ornaments and paper;
- The people did not have iron, although copper, gold and silver were commonly used in all manner of utensils;
- Horses, oxen and even stags were harnessed to wagons, deer being raised like cattle;
- They had a written language;
- They lived in well constructed plank homes, without fortifications of any kind as they did not believe in war;
- There were two prisons, north and south,

the former for serious offences, the latter for misdemeanors;

● The country was converted to Buddhism by five beggar monks from the kingdom of Kipin in 493 A.D.

Hsui-sin went on to describe in detail some of this land's customs. His record was duly filed and forgotten until 1752, when the French scholar Joseph de Guignes brought it before European experts, who immediately rejected it as preposterous. But, 80 years later, French and German scholars were taking a second, closer look. Another 40 years passed, when an American, Edward P. Vining, wrote an 800-page study of the ancient account.

Vining concluded that Hsui-sin had described western America, from Alaska to Mexico. One reference which impressed him was that of The Land of Marked Bodies, which he deduced must have been Alaska, whose Eskimos practised tattooing. He also concluded the fusang tree was actually Mexico's mahogany tree.

Early cartographers placed the mystic land of Fusang to the north—Vancouver Island. An interesting conjecture, noted McKelvie, for "examination of some of the burial mounds of the ancient Coast dwellers near Victoria was made in 1871 by James Deans. The mounds disclosed somewhat similar customs to those described in the disposition of condemned criminals in the northern prison of Fusang."

"Deans found that the man, partially cremated, had been placed face down in a hollow, over which a flat stone had been deposited. Ashes had been sprinkled about the tomb before the mound was constructed." (This execution closely tallies with Hsui-sin's record.)

Some historians believe the fabled Hsui-sin record prompted Peter the Great to dispatch the Bering expedition to the Alaskan Panhandle, thought by some to have been the lost kingdom of Fusang...

Many inexplicable discoveries of coins (or tablets; discs that resemble coins and for lack of contrary evidence can be accepted as such) have been recorded in the U.S. Some are given here.

Irene Heads Towards Success

By BERT BINNY

A young lady who has recently loomed large in both musical and dramatic circles hereabouts is 16-year-old Irene Boese.

*She was runner-up to the best actress, Miss Sandra Gallagher, in the senior division of the 1967
Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival.*

And Miss Boese was referred to by vocal adjudicator, Wyndham Williams, as the "find of the Festival"—the Music Festival of 1966.

Of her three stated ambitions in life, a career in acting and/or singing is definitely the first.

Irene has the incentive and the desire. In addition, it would certainly appear that she also has the talent to put her squarely on the road to success.

Irene was born on Sept. 1, 1950, in the city of Munich, Germany. She came to Canada at the age of seven and has been back in Europe in the intervening period. She speaks both English and German fluently but, says she, after her latest sojourn in Germany when she first returned to speaking English, "the words just wouldn't come out of my mouth."

No such curious difficulty, however, hampered her performance as Antigone in, as Hollywood might put it, "the play of the same name." This was the performance that earned Irene second spot among all senior actresses at the 1967 Drama Festival. And there were some good ones, too!

And this Antigone, an adaptation by Jean Anouilh of the Greek classics of Sophocles, was a 1967 Honor Play by Oak Bay Senior Secondary school; incidentally, their ninth such Honor Performance in the last 14 years.

"It absorbed us completely," said the Festival adjudicator, Mrs. Gwen Pharis Ringwood, of this production. Now a Grade 11 student at Oak Bay, Irene formerly attended Norfolk House and St. Ann's Academy.

Her drama career started in 1965 when she played Ole Luluie in a fantasy, Swisscherd. The director, Mrs. Pat Fairweather, was responsible for encouraging Irene to try out in an activity which has proved so successful. As Ole Luluie she received Honorable Mention from adjudicator, Carl Hare.

The Norfolk House play of 1965, Shakespeare,

IRENE BOESE
... actress-singer

never reached the Festival boards due to a cast eliminated by illness. It was, however, produced subsequently and Irene was offered a six-week scholarship at the Banff School of Fine Arts.

In the fall of 1966, Irene played Miss Van Hayzen in Oak Bay Senior's production of The Matchmaker, Thornton Wilder's two-act farce which ran 486 performances on Broadway and was a Burns Mantle best play of 1955-56.

As to her elementary days, Irene "just can't remember."

Miss Boese is also going strong in the musical world.

In 1966 she won her Lieder class, 15 to 21 years, handsily with fine support from an excellent accompanist, Colin Borneau. Two adjudicators, Mr. Wyndham Williams and Mr. Neil van Allen, were on hand.

"What a performance!" said Mr. Williams,

"Bravo, the singer!"

And he awarded Irene and Colin 80 points, the highest mark obtained by any vocalist throughout the Festival.

In the class for Folk Songs—14 or 15 years—Irene tied for second place with Madeleine Groom and Penelope Beavan. She placed third in a large field of 11 in the Solo class for girls 14 or 15, years of age.

In three entries in 1965 she scored two seconds and a third and she obtained a second and a third in 1964.

Lieder and folk songs are her favorite media and she has always placed in the top three in competition involving these. She has a great regard for the music of Schubert and Beethoven.

She is back in the Music Festival this year.

Irene, like everybody else, is not completely happy about answering repertorial questions — as she puts it—"right off the handle."

Nevertheless, the names that pop up instantly in answer to such sudden queries are doubtless those which created the deepest impressions originally.

Thus Julie Christie and Omar Sharif are her favorite actress and actor. Her taste apparently veers sharply in the direction of 'epics' in the matter of movies, such as Ben Hur and Lawrence of Arabia as well as Dr. Zhivago and Zorba, the Greek. But, on TV, Irene prefers variety programs such as that purveyed by Ed Sullivan.

As noted already, Irene's primary objective in life is a career in acting or singing.

There is every indication that she has the necessary qualifications well on the way. Not in she being at all precocious in thinking — and talking — along such lines even before she is 17 years old. Precedent is certainly on her side.

Both Ellen Terry and Sarah Siddons were fully launched on their stellar careers at 18, Gertrude Lawrence and Ethel Barrymore at 16.
Mrs. Fluke started at three and was playing a "brooches" part in New York at six. Eleanor Duse toddled around the stage as an "extra" at four and graduated as a principal at 12. And Laurette Taylor had her own vaudeville act—improvisations, no less!—also at 12 years of age.

Jean Anouilh's Antigone was first produced in 1944 during the German occupation of France.

Some authorities and experts have, therefore, perceived in the tragic daughter of Oedipus "a woman's stand against tyranny." Somehow, I think this is rather too facile an explanation and the real answer as to what motivated Anouilh's Antigone has deeper roots.

True, it may well be the portrait of a young woman rebelling against oppression but she is still and ever the restless and, appealing, little
sometimes receive the sobriquet of "little orphan Anouilh." She it was, surely, who appeared as Amanda in Time Remembered or as Chloé in The Walk of the Treaders?

And was she not almost certainly Joan of Arc in The Lark?

She is a person of talent no matter what her name; she is kindly but very determined; she accomplished her end and much besides.

A curious parallel! She and Irene have a lot in common.

Was Columbus a Latecomer by More Than 3,000 Years?

Inspection disclosed it to be an ancient, oval coin, the size of an English shilling. The figures stamped upon its surface were distinct, representing "a warrior or hunter and other characters, apparently of Roman origin."

This coin was raised from a depth of 30 feet.
As investigation could not confirm rumors the workmen faked its discovery, it can only be assumed that it had been buried in Virginia soil a long, long time...

The 1833 excavation by A. B. Tomlinson of an ancient mound of his Grave Creek, West Va., property is well recorded. Among the artifacts recovered was a tiny disc, its inscription later termed "alphabetical." Originally denounced as fraudulent, it was supported by the 1857 Congress Archaeologists held at Nancy, France.

To this day, controversy has raged about the supposed meaning of its inscription; it remains yet another puzzle to those who follow this intriguing field.

The year 1843 saw the Connecticut discovery of a strange copper coin bearing mysterious symbols. Again, no satisfactory explanation.

In 1881 the American Philologist Society investigated a small bronze coin which Jacob W.

Moffitt found at a depth of 120 feet, while drilling for water in Chillicothe, Illinois. The evident skill with which the coin had been executed indicated the advancement of its creators — whoever they were.

The list continues: An ancient "Greek" coin unearthed in Illinois; a Roman coin dating back to Domitianus Domitianus, found in the same state; a coin dated 1215 in North Carolina; a copper coin in Michigan; and several stone "Hebrew" tablets.
Most were uncovered in or near prehistoric burial mounds. A Roman coin "of the reign of Caesar Augustus" was turned up in Panama by the first Spaniards.

Perhaps the stange caches of B.C. should not be classified with these. The American finds would indicate an unknown — and intelligent — people on this continent prior to Columbus, but of European origin. Which is a mystery itself.

The B.C. discoveries are definitely Asiatic.
Which is not hard to understand when realizing only the Pacific Ocean separates the two great continents. Of particular note are the Aleutian Islands and the eastward-flowing Japanese Current. Whether these forgotten adventurers arrived as the result of shipwreck or design will undoubtedly remain one of the Northwest's unsolved mysteries.

Interesting is the fact that mountains and fierce Indians lay between the coast and Cassiar territory. Did these visitors, under attack, bury the coins before being overpowered...?

Sadly, the possibilities are endless and overshadow known facts. But they do establish that this field definitely is worthy of serious study.

Perhaps, in this centennial year, we would not be amiss in sparing a brief thought to these anonymous wanderers — B.C.'s first settlers.

The Church in the French Era

From Colonization to the British Conquest, 1763 — M. H. Welsh

The Church in the French Era is devoted to the French missionary church and the unusual role it played in producing a form of Christianity to be found only in Canada; there is also a consideration of its contribution to French-Canadian nationalism, still keenly felt despite all attempts at assimilation by the English. The origin of this cultural island is an important facet of this study of the spiritual and structural development of the French-Canadian church.

PLACE FOR BIRDS URGED IN LAND-USE PLANNING

Reviewed by ALEC MERRIMAN
Outdoors Editor

The United States Department of the Interior Fish and Wildlife Service has done a fine job in its publication of Birds in Our Lives. This is a truly remarkable and thorough book dealing with birds and their relationships with man.

It is a book almost anyone would delight to have on his bookshelf, a book that should be a must for families with growing children and one that every outdoorsman, be he bird watcher, hunter or just one who likes to see birds at his family feeder, will enjoy.

It is a factual story about birds and people. It tells of the positive value of birds . . . of the enjoyment and inspiration that birds give to millions of people. It tells also of problems, warnings, and hopes, too. The perspective is broad and the view is many-sided.

Sixty-one different authors, with a wide range of backgrounds, many of them internationally known, have contributed, telling their side of the bird story with authority, clarity, and simplicity.

The 378-page book, much the same size as the old Charm and Boys' Own Annual, if you remember them, is attractively illustrated with 60 wash drawings and 372 story-telling photographs.

It brings into focus the economic, aesthetic, scientific and recreational values of the 850-odd species that comprise the bird resources of North America and Hawaii.

For Young Readers

HAWAIIAN MYTH OF HAKA, SEA, AND HAKI, by Vivian L. Thompson. Illustrated by Leonard Weisgard. Holiday House; 64 pp.; $2.95.

This is a handsome, well-designed, well-written book by an author who lives in the Hawaiian Islands. It begins with "The Time of Deep Darkness," the Hawaiian myth of creation, which is most distinctive. Leonard Weisgard has used red-earthen coloring, plus green and black, for his attractive pictures. Children will enjoy the story-telling quality of the book. There are many Hawaiian words in the glossary. Ages 8-11.

BIRDS IN OUR LIVES: Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20540; 378 pages; $5.

Five chapters consider bird problems for better or worse, including problems at airports; damage birds cause to power and communication systems; the favorable and unfavorable effects of birds on farming and forestry; and the pleasures and problems that birds bring to cities and suburbs.

A major thesis of the book is that if we are to continue to have birds in abundance and variety, their future must be considered in land-use planning at all levels of government.

Birds in Our Lives is the second of a projected series of books on North American wildlife resources being planned and produced under the U.S. bureau of sport fisheries and wildlife. Waterfowl Tomorrow, the first in the series, is a 176-page volume that tells about the management and conservation of 60 species of migratory ducks, geese and swans that live in North America. Three countries—Mexico, the United States and Canada—participated in its production.

Birds in Our Lives may be purchased from the address given above and it is worth every penny and much more of the $5 cost.

A refreshingly candid portrayal of an unconventional man and a troubled woman caught in a crisis of need.

In this first novel written by a British Columbia author, Cicely Louise Evans portrays with maturity and wit, two troubled, acutely perceptive adults coping with past mistakes in the light of a growing crisis. The polished crown of the newel post had been Charlotte Porter's talisman throughout many desperate moments, but there came a time when it lost its power to comfort and counsel. At this crucial juncture, the unexpectedly disturbing influence of her next door neighbour, Stanning, forced her to redesign her life. Now at bookstores. $4.95.

Masses of Space For Dull Statistics

I love reference books. So does my wife. In fact we find them so irresistible that we possess an assortment of 118 of them.

It is sad, therefore, to have to report that the above two books are virtually worthless.

The Directory and Almanac of Canada contains nothing that isn't readily available elsewhere, either in the public library or from specialized sources.

There are 22 pages listing radio and TV stations; a total of 56 pages are devoted to stocks and shares handled by the Toronto Stock Exchange. Most incredible of all is a list of post offices and railway stations which takes up no fewer than 83 pages.

Masses of space is devoted to dull statistics supplied by each provincial government as well as the federal government. In fact lists and statistics which anyone can collect, form the bulk of this tome.

Against this lavish waste of space, other things receive skimpy coverage. Canadian history (which doesn't belong in such a book anyway) is condensed to the point of absurdity, and — a small point — the Dominion Drama Festival of 1966 entry lists the winners but omits the information as to where it was staged (Victoria) and who adjudicated (Marius Goring).

Why, in a book dealing with Canada is there a section on the government of the United Kingdom (which, astonishingly, includes the British Museum)? And why is a section devoted to the United States government? And why does the book contain complete information of U.S. postal services and zip codes?

Literaries are listed with names of chief librarians, but listing of hospitals omits names of administrators.

One could go on and on pointing out the imperfections, but what's the use? Just take my word for it that it isn't worth buying.

Pleasant Stories for Bedside Reading

THE BATTLE OF MOLE RUN, by Howard T. Mitchell. Mitchell Press Limited. 125 pages. $4.50.

Every month for 16 years the publisher of Western Homes & Living contributed to this excellent publication a page of rambling reminiscences. This little book is a selection of these pieces.

Howard Mitchell is a keen observer and a kindly philosopher and the simple incidents he describes make pleasant reading, chiefly because of the charm of his unhurried style and the obvious joy he experiences in the telling.

Nearly all the stories he relates bear retelling. This book belongs on the bedside table so that one may read a few pages and enjoy a quiet chuckle before dozing the light. A gentle book by a gentle man.

THE QUY EFFECT, by Arthur Sellings. General Publishing. 141 pages. $1.15.

Admirers of this English science fiction writer will find The Quay Effect as satisfying as The Silent Speakers and The Uncensored Man, the two books that established Sellings' reputation.

The twist in The Quay Effect is that the scientist, Adolphe Quay, is a non-hero. He never completes anything and is branded as totally unreliable and a complete scientific misfit. It follows that when he claims to have invented a new form of power no one believes him.

The old man persists in his work only because his young grandson has faith in him. With the boy's moral support Quay perfects his world shattering invention.

Sweeping Panorama of Kenya Was Climbers' Reward

Neither machines nor passengers were able to proceed a foot further. We had to camp where we were. It grew bitterly cold and an icy dew drenched everything. A fire was built and we huddled around it trying to get warm enough to sleep, but the bitter chill was silently invincible and we grew more miserable with each bleak hour.

As partial compensation for our wretchedness, the African night sky put on a spectacular display that night. Tens of thousands of stars glowed and glittered in unfamiliar southern configurations. A shower of meteorites streaking overhead added animation and excitement to the spectacle. The majestic mountain stillness was broken only by the sound of various of our members vomiting quietly behind a rock as altitude sickness took hold.

By the welcome light of a very red dawn we could see that the ground was glistening white with hard frost. The water in our canteens was frozen solid, and where my breath had touched my sleeping-bag, a shiny lump of ice had formed — this literally within sight of the equator! One of the German boys found that his very elaborate tape recorder had frozen solid, thereby depriving him of music to do his morning exercises by. He was quite upset.

No one had slept well, many were quite ill with mountain sickness, and it looked like a day's work just to get our battered vehicles back down the mountain, so all hopes of climbing were quashed in favor of trying to get back home safely before dark.

Our much abused Land Rover had suffered a rock-gash to its radiator somewhere along the way, and tended to hemorrhage briskly from the wound. At every stream we passed on our way back down we had to stop and collect water for it. The German chaps were great at this. With matchless efficiency half of them would form a little party and march down to the stream, quickly fill the bottles and cans and march back, while the half remaining filmed every move with a vast assortment of movie and slide cameras. At the next stream the former photographers would collect water and their buddies would film them, and so on all the way down the mountain.

After many weary hours of bouncing down the primitive track in our collapsing vehicles, we arrived safely at Kitale. Here we had to abandon our number one Land Rover. As it was led from the field of battle it was leaking oil from the shattered sump, petrol from the ruptured fuel tank, water was leaking from the gashed radiator and the only remaining spare tire was rapidly going flat. Ave etque vale!

The trip home in the remaining Land Rover was a trifle crowded and uncomfortable, but quite uneventful. We eased our discomfort by singing jolly German songs. Already the misery of the night out on the mountain was being forgotten, and the number and ferocity of the elephants was growing.

When we finally reached home late Sunday evening, I drew a hot bath and lowered my aching carcass luxuriantly into it. The events of the weekend mellowed and became humorous, my aching bones began to feel just comfortably tired, and I became filled with supreme content. A small firefly fell into the tub with me and began to blink his green light on and off in the water like a miniature marker buoy. I rescued him, and tried to remember if the water had been so brown when I first climbed in, but it was too much effort to think back that far.

Buddha known as the Minister of Propaganda. Here one goes for comfort when he feels insecure or thinks that his fellows hold a low opinion of him.

At the end of seven months Charlie came home to Brentwood. Today the installation of the system at Taiwan is practically completed. It was paid for by the Chinese with United States A.I.D. (Assistance for International Development). He was asked to go to Saigon on a similar mission but declined. He had by now discovered why he had retired and he intended to make the most of it.

Charles Brown was born in Detroit, Michigan, as he puts it "many years ago." He is a typical North American mongrel he adds, of French-Canadian, German, and Welsh ancestry. He served in the U.S. navy for seven years including the First World War and was in the American Air Force for four years of the last war.

A man of parts, he once played on the Broadway stage. In December, 1918, while serving in the navy aboard the battleship New Mexico — the first electrically propelled ship in the world — the ship's company began rehearsing Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Charlie played the lead and the play was such a roaring success that it moved to the Princess Theatre on Broadway where it ran for a week.

Charlie once loved to sing but some years ago he underwent throat surgery and had to make a tremendous effort to learn to speak again and this he did by using his sinuses in place of his vocal chords. The Browns don't talk much about those terrible years, but Charlie's sheer grit and determination pulled him through and he now speaks as well as anyone.

His ordeal has not affected his cheerful outlook on life and he looks forward to the quiet happiness of his life at Brentwood with his wife and daughter.

*On a warm clear day in Zeballos, there is silence in the hotel's shady pub.
Suddenly a middle-aged man appears in the doorway and looks across the room at the publican.*

"Is he here yet?" he asks.
The hotelman looks up slowly and says: "No, he's not here yet."
"Oh," says the man. "Hm." Then he turns and walks away.
Again there is silence, broken once or twice by chatter of children playing in an old shed across the street.
The hotelman looks out the window at the sunlight streaming down on the little village.
"Not much happens here," he says.
"I wish I was out fishing today," he says.
"I wish I was down by the river, where I could throw a line out, and be back and not give a damn whether I caught anything or not."

Outside, the clear river cuts through the motionless town, flowing to Zeballos Arm.

Zeballos will be sleepy until a road connects it with Tahsis, and another road connects Tahsis with Gold River, and travellers can move north and west and see the Island properly.

There's a lot to see.

Rocky little islands in the Pacific, where the blue sea crashed white, and flyers swoop to catch a glimpse of sunning sea lions.

Steep hills where green forests pick up a white dust and become snowy mounds at their crest.

And Friendly Cove, where waves smash against a half-moon beach.

Camps like Fair Harbor, where children troop on a sunny morning to the two-room school, to learn their lessons.

Pilot Bruce Smith brought his B.C. Airlines Beaver down deftly on the mirror water of Kynquut Sound, and his party of travellers was met by Wally Fedje, manager of Tahsis Company logging operation at Fair Harbor.

"We've got a crew of 100," he said. "There are 30 families here, and 70 single men."

There are 35 children in Fair Harbor's attractive little two-room school. At Zeballos there is one of the sweetest name coincidences you could find.

A one-time Victoria harbor tour boat is now delivering liquor to the iron ore centre.

And its name . . . would you believe, the Merry Meade?

Zeballos is not a company town. It is an incorporated village, where Reeve Stan Jones presides over a town of wooden fronts, muddy streets.

On a quiet day, walking down the main street, you expect at any moment to see Gary Cooper come striding up the road toward you, his hand by his holster.

Tahsis, on the other hand, is a company town.

The Tahsis Company runs a big sawmill on a two-shift system, selling lumber to ships from around the world.

And company personnel are also responsible for maintaining a happy, well-run community.

Lack of democratic government and property ownership is matched by the low rents, the ability to not only earn money, but to save it.

Recreations range from the library to bowling to bingo, and just drinking.

There is a Red Cross, motion pictures, three churches and boxing—"bring your mouthpieces and running shoes," says the mimeographed Tahsis Times.

When roads connect the pockets of people on the west coast, many more people will be able to visit the area, enjoy the scenery, and search for the remote charm of self-contained lives.

But they probably won't find that charm.

Because roads have two lanes, and when people can go in, people can come out.

The spirit built of isolation will be churned under the wheels of traffic on new roads.
